Senate Kills Housing Aids Urged for Co-Op Units

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Administration suffered a major defeat on its Fair Deal program yesterday when the Senate rejected, 43 to 38, President Truman's middle-income housing aids for cooperatives and nonprofit organizations.

A coalition of conservatives successfully backed a motion by Senator John Bricker (R., Ohio) to strike from the omnibus housing measure the special aids asked by the President in his State of the Union message.

Just before the vote, Administration forces made a last-minute attempt to salvage the billion-dollar program. Chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee proposed a definite 4-percent interest rate on Government credit for such cooperative housing, instead of the indefinite rate that was expected to be about 3 or 3¼ percent.

In favor of the Bricker move to kill the Administration proposal were 30 Republicans and 13 Democrats, and on the losing side were 32 Democrats and 6 Republicans.

Substitute Rejected

Then, by a 66-to-14 vote, the Senate rejected a substitute by Senators Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.) and Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.). This would have placed the cooperatives under the Federal Housing Authority at regular FHA rates.

The "middle-income" section was the chief controversial section of the omnibus housing measure, which includes broadened credit aids for private home builders and extension of several existing Government mortgage insurance programs.

The measure now goes to the House, whose Banking and Currency Committee has reported favorably on an Administration measure containing a cooperative program twice as large as that rejected by the Senate. Despite clearance by the House Rules Committee, indications are that the measure will face tough going in the House also.

The Senate-passed measure would:

1. Authorize $2,006,000,000 for FHA's so-called Title I and Title II mortgage insurance programs. One is for smaller loans on home repairs and the other for private building of individual homes.

Another Program

The program continues in modified form mortgage insurance for large rental housing developments. The Senate also adopted by voice vote an amendment by Maybank to authorize another 400 million dollars for large-scale rental projects under a different program—the so-called "608," whose authorization expired March 1. The amendment would provide insurance only for applications filed by February 1. An amendment to extend that to February 15, offered by Senator Kenneth Wherry (R., Neb.) was defeated, 47 to 26.

2. Provide 150 million dollars in direct long-term home loans to veterans unable to get private financing. An amendment by Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) to knock this out was defeated by voice vote.

3. Provide for a 300 million dollar program of long-term, low-cost loans to educational institutions for students and faculty housing projects.

4. Provide for disposal of all war housing, including transfer of 43,000 units for use as low-rent public housing projects.

In connection with the insurance program for large rental projects, the Senate approved, 61 to 21, an amendment by Senator Russell B. Long (D., La.) requiring a larger investment by builders of large-scale rental projects. The amendment cuts from 90 to 85 percent the maximum insurance on the first $7100 for each unit, and raises from 60 to 70 percent the maximum on all units over $7100.

GI Convicted Of Illegal Penicillin Sales

A Fort Belvoir sergeant was convicted by a court martial yesterday of blackmarketing penicillin and syringes to two local veterinarians.

Sergt. Roy H. Rogers, 25, of Portsmouth, Va., was given a dishonorable discharge and sentenced to serve 1½ years at hard labor. He also forfeited his rights to all pay and allowances.

The specifications charge that in August and November, 1949, Rogers sold 20 vials of penicillin and nine syringes, worth $167, to Dr. Marshall J. Waple, jr., of Alexandria, and 10 vials of penicillin worth $80 to Dr. John R. Keeler, 8109 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, Md.

Both veterinarians testified yesterday that they had bought the supplies from Rogers.

Dr. Waple said he paid "much less than $167." He said Rogers came to his office in Alexandria and offered to sell the supplies.

Dr. Keeler said he bought 10 vials, and paid $2.50 per vial. He said the going market price from wholesale houses at the time was between $3 and $4 per vial. "The Government must have taken a licking if they contracted to buy those vials for $8 each," he said.

Rogers represented himself as a salesman, Dr. Keeler said, and was dressed in civilian clothes.

The six-man court martial deliberated less than an hour before finding Rogers guilty.

100 Reservations Filed for Trips To Other Worlds

New York, March 15 (AP).—About 100 persons made reservations today for a space trip to other worlds.

The idea actually is a gag to advertise the Hayden Planetarium's simulated trip into space by means of paintings and replicas of other planets.

But the planetarium notes the reservations with a straight face. If and when somebody comes up with a real space ship, the list will be turned over to the operator.

First to make a reservation was William A. Shay. He described himself by telegram as "interplanetary correspondent" of the Schenectady, N. Y., Union-Star.

He wants to go to the moon, he said.

D. C. Laundry Prices Rise With Wages

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Wage boosts of 10 to 20 cents an hour have been granted the city's estimated 5000 laundry workers, bringing them up to the Federal minimum wage rate, and the result is a rise in laundry prices here.

Most of the laundries here are not covered by the Federal act, which went from 40 to 75 cents an hour on January 25, but the effect has been felt.

Wilmer Balderson, executive secretary of the Laundry and Dry Cleaning Association of D. C., said that laundry operators "have to compete for the labor market" and if 75-cent hourly rates are available in covered industries and not in laundries, an exodus would result.

Balderson said almost all of the local laundries have hiked their wage rates to the 75-cent level and "eventually they will all be up there."

55-65 Cent Minimum

The District minimum wage, to which most of the local laundries are subject, calls for from 55 to 65 cents an hour. Unless firms do more than 50 percent of their business across the District line, they are not legally required to comply with the Federal law.

The largest wage hike reported was at the Manhattan Laundry and Dry Cleaning Co., 1326 Florida ave. nw., where the present 55-cent-an-hour rate—plus incentives—has gone up to 75 cents. As a result shirt prices have been upped two cents; sheets one cent and an average seven-percent increase placed on finished work.

At Bergmann's Laundry, 623-627 G st. nw., the average hourly increase is 15 cents. Shirt prices are up 2 cents and sheets 1 cent.

13-Cent Boost at Yale

The Yale Laundry, 437 New York ave. nw., has a 13-cent hourly wage increase. Shirt rates are up 2 cents and sheets a penny.

A fourth large laundry, which asked not to be identified, reported an average wage increase of 10 cents an hour. Finished flatwork has risen from 11 to 12 cents a pound; sheets from 11 to 13 cents and shirts from 18 to 21 cents.

When the new Federal minimum wage first went into effect, several laundry firms located here were pondering the possibility of organizing separate companies for business done outside the District and thus ridding themselves of the Federal wage requirement. This plan was dropped, however, the Laundry and Dry Cleaning Association reported.

Three Lose Jobs For Refusal to Sign Ober Pledges

Baltimore, March 15 (AP).—All three members of the Quaker faith who refused to sign the loyalty affidavits required of public employes by the Ober law will lose their jobs.

They are Dr. Miriam E. Bralley, head of the Baltimore City health department's bureau of tuberculosis; Miss Doris Shamleffer, who worked for the State department of employment and registration, and Miss Elizabeth Haas, an employe of Baltimore's Enoch Pratt Free Library.

The city solicitor's office said Dr Bralley must be discharged immediately, and that the library had no choice but to discharge Miss Haas.

Miss Shamleffer, told yesterday she could work for the State no longer, left the job today.

The antisubversive law was reinstated Monday. The three Quakers are the first to lose their jobs, although State officials concede none is subversive.

The law, among other things, requires loyalty affidavits from all State, city and county officials and employes, including school teachers. The Quakers had opposed the law in principle.

Daughter Charges Temple U. Virtually Imprisoned Father

MRS. JANICE KING
Contests father's will

A Silver Spring woman is fighting the will of her doctor father, charging that Temple University got more than $1,500,000 from him in gifts by lavishing exaggerated attention on him in his last years.

A suit was entered in Reno, Nev., by Mrs. Janice Chase King of 2000 Shorefield rd. Her father, Dr. Theodore Chase, noted Philadelphia surgeon, died February 12 in Temple University Hospital where, she charged, he was kept a virtual prisoner during his declining years.

Dr. Chase, who was 84, gave the Philadelphia university $1,400,000 in four gifts since 1945, said Mrs. King's husband, Rufus G. King, jr., yesterday. Under the will's terms the university received his entire estate except for a bequest of $1000 to Mrs. Helen Seaman, of Yonkers, N. Y. The estate amounted to but $3400.

Mrs. King was not mentioned in

State Dept. To Open Files In Loyalty Quiz

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Senator Tydings (D., Md.) announced yesterday that the State Department has promised him "free and unlimited" access to its files of persons suspected of being disloyal or security risks.

At the same time, Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), whose charges of Communist infiltration in the State Department Tydings and a Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee are investigating, said he would "reluctantly" give Tydings the names involved in 81 cases.

McCarthy outlined these cases, without giving names, in a Senate speech on February 20. Tydings has been seeking the names from McCarthy ever since the investigating subcommittee was set up. Yesterday, talking to reporters, he repeated the demand in sharp words.

A few hours later, McCarthy wrote him he would turn them over in a few days, and by Monday at the latest.

This will permit Tydings and three newly employed investigators to search, at one time, the files in the 81 cases, plus those of some 33 more names that McCarthy has given the subcommittee.

Other major developments yesterday in connection with the investigation of McCarthy's charges were:

1. U. S. Ambassador-at-Large Philip C. Jessup, hurriedly called back from Far East and European talks after McCarthy said he had "an unusual affinity for Communist causes," arrived here yesterday. He said he was ready to appear be-

Tight Secrets Security Bill Passes House

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The House yesterday voted 369 to 2 to throw a new wall of safeguards around National Defense secrets in one of the tightest security measures ever passed in peacetime.

Stiff new penalties for espionage and conspiracy to reveal restricted data were provided along with new measures for dealing with foreign-trained agents.

The statute of limitations against espionage prosecutions would be extended to 10 years or longer. The Secretary of Defense, with the approval of the President, would be granted virtual wartime powers to protect military installations.

The bill, called up and passed under House calendar Wednesday procedure, was originally recommended by an Interdepartmental Intelligence Committee, composed of representatives of key Government security agencies.

Eliminated from the bill before it went to the floor was one of the original provisions, permitting use of evidence obtained by wiretapping in the Federal courts, under certain limitations.

The only two votes against the bill were cast by Representatives Vito Marcantonio (A. L. P., N. Y.) and Adam Clayton Powell, jr., (D., N. Y.).

The bill was reported by the House Judiciary Committee nearly 10 months ago, and yesterday's overwhelming approval plainly reflected the recent run of espionage cases.

The committee told the House that "serious gaps in our present laws permit people, both citizens

Alexander F. Jones Appointed Syracuse Executive Editor

Alexander F. Jones, assistant to the publisher of The Washington Post, has been named executive editor of The Syracuse Herald-Journal effective April 1. The announcement was made in New York City by Samuel I. Newhouse, owner of The Herald-Journal.

Acceptance of the Syracuse post terminates more than 14 years' service on The Washington Post for Jones. Coming from Minneapolis, he became managing editor of The Post in 1935 and he served in that capacity until 1947. Since 1947 he has been assistant to the publisher.

Jones succeeds Dwight S. Perrin, who resigned because of ill health.

During his residence in Washington, Jones has been active in civic and newspaper affairs. He lives at 4640 Garfield st. nw.

He is second vice president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors and a member of the executive committee of the American Press Institute, Columbia University. He is a director of Children's Hospital, the executive committee of the Salvation Army advisory board, the Family Service Association, the Metropolitan Police Boys Club and has been a strong supporter of Community Chest activities. House Labor Unit Votes 13-12 To Study Teachers' Salary Aid

A House Labor subcommittee yesterday voted, 13 to 12, to keep alive until April 17 a measure by Representative Thomas Burke (D., Ohio) to earmark 75 percent of all Federal education funds for the salaries of school teachers.

The committee first decided to take up the Burke measure and read it for amendments, and then voted to lay it aside until April 17 while a subcommittee studies the question of Federal help for school construction.

The action came after the committee rejected a motion to take up a bill granting funds only to "needy" States, mostly in the South.

Only Tuesday the committee voted, 14 to 10, against taking up the Burke bill.

The sudden reversal, however, apparently does not indicate the committee is any nearer to agreement upon any specific measure than before.

There were charges, countercharges, explanations and rebuttals flying as fast as mud splatters after yesterday's meeting, with some saying the revival of the Burke bill was done for political purposes and others denying it.

Most members, however, were in agreement only upon the fact that if any bill ever does come out of the battle-torn committee it will deal only with the allocation of Federal funds to school buildings.

China Told Not to Strike Non-Red Asia

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary Acheson warned Communist China yesterday not to attack any of the non-Communist countries of Asia, either by invading them or by fomenting civil war.

Any such "adventures," he told the Commonwealth Club in San Francisco, would violate the United Nations Charter and would flout the interests of the entire non-Soviet world.

He even suggested, without saying so directly, that southeast Asia was covered by the so-called Truman Doctrine, under which the United States rushed emergency military help to Greece and Turkey in 1947.

Words From 1947 Message

For, in outlining the conditions of American aid to non-Communist Asia, he recalled President Truman's belief "that it must be the policy of the United States to support free peoples who are resisting attempted subjugation by armed minorities or by outside pressures . . ."

He took these words directly from the President's famous message to Congress on March 12, 1947. In using them he was creating the impression, though without giving a firm assurance, that the peoples of Asia could count on American support against attack, especially in Indo-China.

Officials here see no immediate danger of a Chinese Communist invasion of Indo-China, but they are disturbed by reports that the Chinese are helping their fellow Communists led by Ho Chi-minh along the Indo-China border.

Acheson assured the Chinese people that the American people would remain their friends, in the future as in the past.

So That Chinese May Know

"But," he said, "they should understand that whatever happens in their own country, they can only bring grave trouble on themselves and their friends, both in Asia and beyond, if they are led by their new rulers into aggressive or subversive adventures beyond their borders.

"Such adventures would violate not only every tradition and interest of the Chinese people; they would violate the traditions and interests of their Asian neighbors, of the American people, and indeed of all free peoples.

"They would violate the United Nations Charter. They would violate the peace which the Charter was designed to preserve.

"I say this so that there may be no mistake about the attitude of the United States, no opportunity to distort or twist it, and so that

Stock Prices Push To Highest Levels Since August, 1946

New York, March 15 (AP).—The stock market lunged ahead today to the highest average level since August, 1946.

The market value of all stocks listed on the exchange increased by nearly one billion dollars.

Key issues gained a few cents to around $2 a share.

Trading volume expanded as quotations were boosted.

Brokers saw no particular news to account for the rise but suggested that a revival of investment demand was partly responsible.

$12.8 Billion Defense Fund Recommended

Defense appropriations totaling about $12,800,000,000—less than 200 millions below President Truman's budget—will be presented to the House next week, congressional leaders said yesterday.

Both economy advocates and proponents of higher air power funds were overruled in reaching this decision.

The extreme budget slashers urged cutting military spending by 10 percent, along with other appropriations. Some big Air Force supporters wanted to follow the action taken last year and the year before and add about 800 millions to start expanding toward a 70-group Air Force.

Middle Course Followed

Neither view prevailed. Chairman George Mahon (D., Tex.) of the House defense appropriations subcommittee told The Washington Post that in view of the Administration's action freezing the additional plane money, it would be "futile and unwise" to try again.

While declining to discuss figures as to the appropriations decisions reached by his group, Mahon said he did not feel the bill would boost the funds for the Air Force "or for any other purpose" above the budget.

"Also, with communism overrunning China, and Russia now possessing the A-bomb," he added, "in my opinion no one can take the responsibility for making major reductions in the President's military budget."

Vinson Indicates Approval

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee, indicated he would go along with the appropriations group decision. He led the fight last year to boost air-power funds.

Other equally reliable but anonymous congressional sources said the defense bill probably would be cut about 200 million dollars by the House committee. This reduction will represent the sum total of "trimming" rather than hitting any combat item hard, it was said.

The Mahon subcommittee this week completed more than two solid months of testimony on the defense estimates. They expect to have their portion of the omnibus spending bill ready for the full Appropriations Committee by this weekend. The latter probably will act next week and expects to have the overall bill ready for the House by March 27.

U.S. Arms Aid Approved By French Assembly

Paris, March 15 (U.P.).—The French National Assembly tonight approved ratification of the United States military aid pact, 421 to 179.

Navy Critic Furloughed For Ignoring Talk Order

Will Get Half Pay Effective April 1; Adm. Boone's Post Goes to Adm. Brown

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Capt. John G. Crommelin, outspoken critic of the Defense high command, yesterday was ordered placed on furlough at half pay, effective April 1.

This disciplinary action was taken by Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews, on recommendation of Crommelin's military superiors, apparently for violation of orders issued him last month to stop talking.

The brief Department of Defense announcement of the action gave no reason for the sharp crackdown, but it was recalled that on February 22, Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, chief of naval operations, gave the fiery Navy flier direct orders to make no further public statements critical of Defense officials and policies.

Crommelin, who has acted as if he wanted a court-martial, made a West Coast speech almost immediately afterward in which he declared he was ready to "stand up and be counted among those opposed to the Prussian Pentagon policies."

As his early comments on unification and the high command had been much more specific than this, the Navy gave no immediate indication then as to whether this constituted a violation of Sherman's order.

Officials here said that it would be up to Vice Admiral George D. Murray, commander of the Western Sea Frontier, to initiate disciplinary action if he felt that Crommelin's words violated orders.

Murray has been his immediate superior since Crommelin was reprimanded by Sherman and transferred to the West Coast last December. Yesterday's Navy announcement said that Murray recommended the furlough and that Sherman concurred.

At the same time, the Navy announced that a replacement had been named for another ranking officer who was relieved of his post for criticism of Department of Defense plans.

Boone's Post to Brown

Rear Admiral Clarence J. Brown, now general inspector of Naval Medical activities, will take the place of Rear Admiral Joel T. Boone, veteran Navy doctor who had hit Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson's hospital cutback plan. Boone was senior uniformed medical officer in the Defense Department's office of medical services.

Captain Crommelin played a leading role in the Capitol Hill row last year over unification and war policy. After voicing sharp criticism of his own, he gave out to the newspapers some "confidential" documents along the same line written by Vice Admiral Gerald Bogan, Admiral Louis Denfeld, then chief of naval operations, and Admiral Arthur W. Radford.

This action brought about a congressional investigation of the Navy complaints that they were

Niles, O., Dentist Killed by Train In Union Station

A Niles, Ohio, dentist, attending the 18th annual postgraduate clinic of the D. C. Dental Society, was killed at Union Station last night when he fell beneath a B. & O. train.

The man was identified as Dr. Edward J. Lally, about 50, who was struck at 11:30 p. m., as he was waving goodbye to another Ohio dentist, Dr. Mac Staton, of Warren.

There was no witness to the accident, but railroad officials surmised that Dr. Lally walked into the moving train while waving to his friend on a sleeper.

The accident happened on track 8. Police reported both Dr. Lally's legs were cut off. He was dead on arrival at Casualty Hospital, where he was taken in an ambulance.

The Dental Society meeting ended yesterday, but Dr. Lally had decided to extend his visit another week, police said.

Freedom Fair Ready to Roll When Legal Ifs Are Resolved

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Freedom Fair is ready to roll as soon as Attorney General McGrath gives his approval to legal moves to solve its difficulties.

The full Sesqui Commission met at the Capitol yesterday and voted a go-ahead if——

1. The Attorney General approves the commission's plan to give a private, non-profit corporation the right to build and operate the 25-million-dollar Freedom Fair. (This is the key "if." A decision is expected from McGrath in about two weeks, Carter T. Barron, sesqui executive vice chairman, told newsmen after yesterday's meeting. The fair would open next spring, probably on April 15, 1951.)

2. An adequate site can be found. (Sesqui Manager Paul Massmann told the commission he now believes the proposed East Capitol st. site is big enough for an industry building with from 800,000 to one million square feet of exhibit space, instead of the 400,000 originally contemplated. The "U.S.A." buildings would be abandoned).

3. The Attorney General approves the commission's

Brannan, Senators Debate Farm Plans

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Senate Agriculture Committee was the stage yesterday for what may well prove a preview of this year's political campaign in farm States.

Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan and Republican committee members debated, ofter heatedly, two issues, both involved in measures before Congress. They were:

1. A trial run of the Brannan Plan for potatoes in 1951. Two bills, one by Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), the other by Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.), are before the committee. Each would withdraw price supports from potatoes next year unless growers agree to strict, Government-enforced marketing limitations. The Thomas measure, however, provides for "production payments" as part of the price-support machinery. Production payments are the essence of the Brannan Plan.

Under this schedule top-grade spuds would be sold at the market price. If that was below the price-support level the Government would make up the difference to the grower. Lower grades or culls would not be protected.

2. An amendment to the Commodity Credit Corporation charter that Brannan says would kill the farm program. Brannan's attack on this proposal by Senator Edward J. Thye (R., Minn.) was reminiscent of successful Administration tactics in farm areas in 1948. The Secretary charged Thye's proposal would do what President Truman and Brannan declared the Republican Eighthieth Congress did—knock out Government-owned grain-stroage facilities. That appeal was credited with carrying the traditionally Republican Midwest farm States for Mr. Truman two years ago.

Brannan got support on the Thye amendment from Democrats on the committee, but little for his appeal for the Brannan Plan. Thye battled for his proposal, but agreed that if it took CCC out of grain storage "then it must be corrected."

Thye lectured Brannan and his staff about alleged shortcomings of CCC in handling grain purchases. He offered letters from country elevator men complaining that CCC was slow in paying for grain. They also urged Thye to insist that CCC employ cash commission men in terminal markets such as Minneapolis and Kansas City.

Frank K. Woolley, who handles grain purchases for CCC, finally fired a long and angry reply to Thye. Woolley declared that:

1. Cash commission men had promoted the letters from elevator men urging use of the formers' services. He said to do so would double the already heavy grain losses.

2. Many of those who complained about slow payments by CCC were themselves responsible. He read case histories of witnesses who had reported such delays. These indicated that several had failed to send invoices for their grain, others had shipped grain without orders, and similar shortcomings.

The Thye amendment states that CCC "shall employ dealers, commission merchants, etc." The present chapter says they shall be employed "to the maximum extent practicable." Brannan listed eight objections. Summed up they would divest CCC of virtually all its present operations.

Brannan tangled with Thye and Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.) over production payments. A visitor, Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.), also got into the row. Brannan insisted the present program gave the same protection to potato farmers who refused to limit the size of their crops, as to those who comply with all Government limitations.

"Since the total market is supported by Government purchases," he said, "the noncooperator obtains price support without reducing acreage."

By letting prices drop in the market, he said, the noncooperator would not get this protection.

"The best grades would move into the market place," he argued, "and the consumer would get the benefit."

"We're here to try to help the potato farmer," Lucas said, interrupting Brannan. "Let's not get off on consumers yet."

Several Senators agreed that the high losses in potatoes which Brannan said soon would total 500 million dollars were threatening the entire farm program.

Finally Senator Aiken commented that "controls could be adopted" so that the potato program would not cost the taxpayers "one cent except for 100 million dollars a year for administration and policing."

The committee will continue the hearing today; the potato program at 10 a. m.; the CCC measure afterward.

Olds' Report

U. S. Steel's Production Rank Drops

New York, March 15 (AP).—Stockholders of United States Steel Corp. were told today that the proportion of the Nation's steelmaking capacity owned by the company "has shown a downward trend since the earliest years" of its existence.

Chairman Irving S. Olds in the annual report said United States Steel's annual capacity as of January 1 was 32 million tons of steel ingots and castings, or 32.2 percent of the national total.

A year earlier "Big Steel" owned 32.5 percent of the Nation's ingot capacity, while back in 1902 the company possessed 44.2 percent and actually produced 65.2 percent of all steel made in the country.

United States Steel's report was made public tonight less than 24 hours after two United States Senators commented in Washington on the state of the industry.

Views Contrasted

Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) said the Democratic majority of the Senate-House Economic Committee believe there is no practical competition in the steel industry. Senator Taft (R., Ohio) differed with him, asserting competition was "reasonably active."

U. S. Steel's chairman in his report noted that the company's relative position in the industry has grown smaller despite its addition of more than 700,000 tons of ingot capacity during 1949.

On the matter of size alone, Olds said:

"Some prewar critics asserted that U. S. Steel was too large; later, as the world emergency and its postwar consequences developed, it was contended that the capacity of U. S. Steel was too small. As recently as a year ago, the Government urged the building of additional steel mills, with Government funds if necessary. Yet by the third quarter of 1949 the demand for most steel products was substantially less than the capacity of the steel industry to produce.

Market Research

"Specialists, qualified in market research, continually seek to keep U. S. Steel's management accurately advised on the growing and changing steel needs throughout the United States and the rest of the world."

The company, Olds reported, has expended $875.1 million for facilities in the postwar period, of which $179.1 million was spent during 1949.

Meyer, chairman of the Board of The Washington Post, said yesterday. "Casey Jones came to The Washington Post in November 1935. He is leaving now after almost 15 years of service.

"First as Managing Editor and more recently as Assistant to the Publisher, he earned the respect and friendship of his associates on this paper and of his fellows in the profession in this, the world's greatest news center. His departure to Syracuse leaves us here in Washington with a sense of real loss to the community.

"This is mitigated, however, by the feeling that we know he is going to an opportunity and an association where he can exercise his talents, founded on the wide experience of a lifetime in journalism, to the fullest.

"He takes with him the best of goodwill from all of us and the confident expectation that he will make good in his new field of activity as he has throughout his career.

Philip L. Graham, publisher of The Washington Post, said "Mr. Jones' leaving is a matter of severe regret to our entire organization and to his many friends in this community."

"He is a newspaperman of great ability, and an associate and friend with all the best human qualities. He will do an outstanding job in response to this new opportunity.

"We congratulate The Syracuse Herald-Journal and the community of Syracuse."

$16 Million Increase Sought In Funds for Mental Health

A Senate group yesterday heard proposals that the Federal budget for a mental health program be boosted from 9.9 million dollars to 26 million dollars.

Medical and lay witnesses for the national committee for mental hygiene appeared before the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor and Federal Security to urge the expanded program.

Charles Schlaifer of New York, NCMH member, told th esubcommittee taxpayers are saddled with a billion-dollar tax burden each year for mental illness.

"Either we drive all-out to increase mental health research and find the causes of these disorders," he declared, "or the colossal drain on tax revenues will continue."

Emphasizing the humanitarian aspects of mental illness, Miss Isabel Leighton, a NCMH director, said:

"Mental illness is a democratic affliction, striking equally at the rich and poor, cultured and illiterate alike."

Arthur Bunker, New York industrialist and a director of the World Federation for Mental Health, pointed out that 40 percent of the entire Federal health budget is spent for the care of the mentally ill, but only 4.6 percent of Federal medical research is devoted to problems of mental illness.

John C. Virden, board chairman of the Virden Electric Co. of Cleveland, declared that "mental illness is responsible for more absenteeism and more expense to the taxpayer than all other diseases combined."

Dr. George S. Stevenson of New York, medical director of NCMH and president of the American Psychiatric Association, said the public and the psychiatry profession are ready to move ahead in 1950 toward mental health but more funds are needed.

Dr. Douglas D. Bond, head of the Department of Psychiatry of Western Reserve University's Medical School, stated "research and training are the most economical steps to take if the huge problem of mental disease is to be tackled successfully."

And immediate financial help is needed for research into schizophrenia, which accounts for about 50 percent of all patients in mental hospitals, the subcomittee was told by Dr. Johan van Ophuijsen, director of the Institute of Psychobiologic Studies of Creedmoor State Hospital in New York City.

He and his associate, Dr. Arthur M. Sackler, director of research at Creedmoor, stressed the need for research funds because "psychiatric illness is on the increase."

Regional psychiatric research and training institutes were urged by Dr. C. N. Hardin Branch, professor of psychiatry at the University of Utah Medical School.

Webster Takes Oath For Research Office

William Webster of Boston was sworn in yesterday by Defense Secretary Louis Johnson as chairman of the defense department's research and development board.

Webster, executive vice president of the New England Electric Co., is a former consultant to the board and once served as chairman of its atomic energy committee.

Transamerica Assails Bank Holding Bill

The legislation, Samuel B. Stewart jr., told a Senate Banking Subcommittee, contains "unusual police state methods."

Furthermore, he said, "it would appear that the draftsman of this bill (has shown) an excess of zeal to place in a straitjacket the affairs of persons interested in the banking business."

Previously officials of Transamerica, a bank holding company operating in five Western States, have said that the proposed regulations were aimed directly at them.

Denies Transamerica Control

Stewart told the subcommittee that actually the Bank of America is not controlled by Transamerica. The holding company hasn't had that power, he said, for more than 12 years.

He said he suspected that the "attacks upon Transamerica have been based mostly on the growth of Bank of America."

Under the proposed legislation now before the subcommittee, the Federal Reserve Board would be given the regulatory powers over bank holding companies.

Stewart said the bill "would delegate unlimited and unreviewable discretion to the Federal Reserve Board," and that it would allow the board "to decide for itself who is to be regulated, in what circumstances and to what extent."

Stewart said his company does not object to regulation.

But, he said, "it is up to the Congress now to say who is to be regulated and who is not."

He complained of the Reserve Board's "failure to be frank" with the committee, and said that "the law has not heretofore frowned on the mere size."

Actually, he said, the Bank of America has 4.1 percent of the total bank deposits in the United States but, he said, in recent years the greatest growth has been shown by country banks.

Among other things, the legislation would regulate the expansion of bank holding firms. Such companies are defined as those which control a bank operating four or more branches.

Reuther Urges $2089 Pension For Retired American Couples

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Walter Reuther yesterday urged Congress to forge a powerful weapon in the cold war with Russia by setting up a "minimum satisfactory" pension of $2089 a year for all retired American couples.

So eloquent was the 90-minute appeal by the red-headed leader of the CIO United Auto Workers that even the most economy-minded members of the Senate Finance Committee—holding hearings on amendments to the Social Security law—murmured approval at least of parts of the speech.

"The American economy is freedom's greatest asset in the cold war," Reuther told the committee. "The world will judge America, not by our ability to split the atom and to make great technological strides, but by our ability to translate the technical progress into human progress, such as adequate security."

Wins Millikin's Comment

"I think that's a very good way to put it," commented Senator Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.).

America's failure to cope with the problem of unemployment and to provide adequate social security for those "too old to work, too young to die" has provided Russia with two psychological weapons as important as the H-bomb, Ruther declared.

By creating an adequate system of social security for all Americans, the Government also will be attacking unemployment, Reuther said. Unlike young people, the elderly folk will spend their money immediately for consumer goods and thereby stimulate production throughout the country, he observed.

The UAW security program of $174 a month for all American retired couples is more than 3½ times the amount available to them under the present social security system, Reuther said. It would cost more than six billion dollars a year by 1955—or about 2 percent of the Nation's expected production in that year.

Fight for All Americans

Reuther stated that the United Auto Workers, whose more than a million members make it the largest in the country, was pledged to fight for adequate social security not only for the union, but also for all Americans. His own union's drive for employer-financed pensions is part of a drive to win employer support for increased Federal social security, Reuther said.

"We take the position in the union that we can get security only if all Americans get security," Reuther asserted. "Security, like freedom, is indivisible." He said that as Federal pensions increased, the union would deemphasize its own drive for industry pensions, and ultimately eliminate the privately negotiated pensions.

In the long run, Reuther said, Federal pensions will cost less than private pensions, and at the same time permit workers to move around from one job to another, instead of freezing them to one particular job.

Reuther said that the United Auto Workers worked out the $174-a-month "minimum satisfactory" pension for retired couples after four months' study, using as a basis the "Budget for an Elderly Couple" prepared by the Federal Security Agency.

Not "Generous," He Says

This revised budget is hardly a "generous" one, remarked Reuther. It allows one-eighth of a pound of butter a person per week. It permits the man to buy two and one-third shirts a year, and two sets of underwear. He can buy an overcoat every eight years. The woman is permitted one house dress each year, one apron every two and one-half years.

The wife is allowed, under the budget of $174 a month, four and a half pairs of stockings a year, and one handkerchief every year and nine weeks.

At best, Reuther said the union's social security benefits—which are three and one-half times the present benefits—is but an "approach" to a decent solution of the problem.

Truman, Aides Are Well Again Aboard Yacht

Abroad the USS William C. Lawe, March 15 (AP).—Vacationing President Truman felt fine today and figured rough ocean going and seasickness may have their good points after all. They make a man really aappreciate good weather.

Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross said as much when he talked with reporters by radio-telephone from the White House yacht, Williamsburg, carrying Mr. Truman and his aides to Key West, Fla.

Ross quoted the President as saying the weather was so nice and he felt so well it was "well worthwhile" to go through the miserable spell of seasickness he and others of his party suffered early in the week.

Newsmen soon saw for themselves that Mr. Truman was back in fine fettle.

The President appeared in high spirits as he waved a new button-down white cap with a long visor at reporters and photographers aboard this destroyer escort as it pulled near the Williamsburg.

Charges 'Phony,' DP Official Says

NYHT News Service

A Senate Judiciary subcommittee was publicly accused last night of deliberately spreading "phony" charges that displaced persons have entered the United States through fraud in an effort to discredit the DP program.

The charge was made at a stormy hearing of the subcommittee by Harry N. Rosenfield, of New York, a member of the Displaced Persons Commission.

Rosenfield declared the subcommittee, after repeatedly charging for 18 months that displaced persons were using false documents, had "concealed" from the commission any evidence which might have helped stop such frauds.

He said he could only conclude the charges were "phony" and the subcommittee had no direct evidence to substantiate them. Otherwise, he noted, the subcommittee would be guilty of depriving the DP commission of vital evidence necessary to enforce the law.

"Any public official commits a breach of public trust if he conceals evidence that would permit a Government agency to halt a violation of the law," he said.

Earlier Ugo Carusi, DP commission chairman, told the hearing displaced persons are subjected to the most thorough and rigorous security "screening" of any immigrants in history. He branded as deliberate distortions charges that the DP program had opened the Nation's doors to subversives, criminals and other undesirables.

Carusi, a former immigration commissioner, explained in great detail the many checks and procedures set up by the DP law and enforced by the commission.

He admitted that the commission had made a few mistakes, but added: "Some persons have been pretending that we should do a perfect job. This is not possible."

First Such Action

Poland Quits World Bank And Fund

The World Bank and the International Monetary Fund announced yesterday that Poland had withdrawn from the two organizations. This is the first such action since the bodies were set up after the Bretton Woods monetary conference in 1944.

Although Poland's action was not expected at this time, it was, paradoxically, not surprising. It has been clear for some years that the bank would be unable to lend any money to the Russian satellite, and that the fund's operations were of little value to it.

Poland's withdrawal leaves only one other Iron Curtain country, Czechoslovakia, represented on the bank and fund. The probability is that it will soon follow Poland's lead.

May Choose to Stay on

It is conceivable, however, that Russia might choose to have Czechoslovakia continue its membership, for such nuisance value as it might have and for propaganda purposes in international forums.

Other eastern European countries still represented in the two financial organizations are Finland and Yugoslavia.

Camille Gutt, president of the International Monetary Fund, announced Poland's withdrawal from that body yesterday, and made public the formal notification that he received from Polish Ambassador Josef Winiewicz.

It condemned the fund for knuckling under to last fall's monetary devaluation "forced" on other nations by the United States.

Black Releases Letter

Eugene R. Black, president of the International Bank, released, without comment, the letter he received from Winiewicz.

It was a three-page tirade accusing the bank of "complete subservience . . . to the dictates of the United States and its imperialistic policies." It said the bank violated its charter in refusing to give help to Poland, though it was devastated by the war, and in applying "political considerations" in the making of loans.

Early in the bank's history, Poland sought a loan of 200 million dollars. It was refused on several grounds, including the unlikelihood of dollar repayment, and indications that investors in the bank's securities would not buy them if the bank were to make such a loan.

Britain Will Join Payments Union With Safeguards

London, March 15 (U.P.).—Britain will become a full-fledged member of any plan for a European payments union provided there are safeguards against loss of gold and silver, government spokesmen said today.

Experts will meet in Paris soon to discuss ways of making European currencies fully convertible to facilitate the elimination of trade restrictions in Marshall Plan countries.

The British Treasury has completed a draft of a plan agreeing in principle with the payments union program, but insisting that the world use of sterling should not be impaired by it, the spokesman said.

They said the British attitude is that half the world's trade is in sterling and that the proposed union must not prejudice its status as a world currency.

The British plan probably will be supported by the Scandinavian countries, officials here said.

Detroit, March 15 (U.P.).—Benny M. Sasser, 20, won a divorce when he complained that his wife, Murtis, 19, treated him a la Samson and Delilah.

He told Circuit Judge John V. Brennan that his wife cut off all his hair while he was asleep. Sasser was granted a cruelty decree.

Cocktail Parties Seen Topping U. S. Reds as Menace

London, March 15 (U.P.).—Cocktail parties have "replaced the Communist Party as America's greatest menace," the Daily Mail's New York correspondent Don Iddon said today.

"There have been so many cocktail parties in Washington lately that the press is demanding an inquiry into those staged by Government agencies," Iddon said.

He said the parties were held "to help get rid of the piles of surplus food."

He said he attended "two or three a week from a stern sense of duty."

Connally Ready To Modify ECA Oil Import Bill

Senator Connally (D., Tex.) disclosed yesterday he was willing to modify an amendment to the Economic Cooperation Act he proposed last week as a reprisal or corrective to British limitation of American oil imports.

As originally proposed, the amendment appeared to forbid ECA aid to Britain if that nation persisted in substituting oil from British companies for oil that formerly was imported from United States concerns in the Near East.

Suit Alleging Rape in Morgue Is Dismissed

New York, March 15 (AP).—A $200,000 suit against the city by a Bronx housewife, who claimed she was raped in the morgue of Lincoln Hospital, was dismissed today.

Mrs. Louise McIntosh, 50, complained that a morgue attendant, John J. Flanagan, introduced himself as "Dr. Wolf," gave her a whitish fluid to drink and raped her.

She sued on grounds that the city failed to protect her in the hospital where she was taken by ambulance after becoming ill on April 1, 1947. She wandered into the morgue, she said, while seeking medical aid.

Flanagan was arrested but the grand jury failed to indict him and the case was dismissed.

D. C. Papers Dine 12 Japanese Journalists

Twelve Japanese journalists in the United States to study American newspaper techniques were tendered a dinner last night at the Statler Hotel by the four Washington newspapers.

Alexander F. Jones, assistant to the publisher of The Washington Post and a member of the executive committee of the American Press Institute, presided. The API is arranging the tour for the visitors, who were selected by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's staff.

Other speakers were B. M. McKelway, editor of the Washington Evening Star, and Hakuei Ogihara, chief of the foreign news section of the Tokyo newspaper Nihon-keizai Shimbun, who thanked the local editors for their interest and advice.

The Japanese delegation includes one woman, Miss Matsuyo Yamamoto, a reporter for the culture section of the Okayama City newspaper Godo-Shimbun. The others are Keiya Gokan of Kyoto City, Hiroshi Ide of Nagasaki City, Ken Yamaguchi of Fukuoka City, Tokushi Imamura and Morihisa Takagi, both of Osaka City, and Masaji Furuhashi, Hideaki Kawako, Dan Naito, Kunio Sumi and Shinnosuke Maki, all of Tokyo.

East German Chief Appeals To Nationalism

Berlin, March 15. (U.P.) — The Communist-dominated east German state, in its most outspoken appeal yet to nationalism, today promised Germans "greatness, prosperity and freedom" if they would join with the Soviet Union.

East German Foreign Minister Georg Dertinger made the appeal in a foreign policy statement before the audience in the East Berlin House of Soviet Culture. His reference to German greatness was greeted with thunderous applause.

Dertinger said the Soviet Union wanted to unify Germany and wanted to see the evacuation of "enemy interventionist troops." This would mean, he said, reestablishment of German sovereignty and friendship with the nations that rule "one-third of the earth."

Dertinger also made a bid for the support of west German industrialists and revisionists, promising them new markets in the East and the return of the Saar with its rich coal fields.

One Western observer called the foreign policy statement "the frankest and the strongest of many Soviet-backed attempts to revive the worst aspects of German nationalism and harness it to Soviet aims."

Dertinger painted a grim future for the West German Federal Republic. He said the Western Allies plan a 50-year occupation, will deny Germany a peace treaty, will dismantle industry and will annex the Saar.

Mining Bill Crowded From House Agenda

Lengthy debates on two other bills crowded the mine aid bill off the House agenda yesterday.

Chairman Peterson (D., Fla.) of the Public Lands Committee told a reporter the measure will be taken up today for consideration of amendments and he hopes to get a final vote by the House then.

See the special Gardening and Homemaking Section in this Sunday's Post. You'll find this complete magazine-size feature in The Post every Sunday for the next seven weeks.

Fitzgerald Challenged to Debate Carey

James B. Carey, who heads the right-wing CIO International Union of Electrical Workers (IUE), yesterday challenged his arch-foe, Albert J. Fitzgerald, president of the left-wing United Electrical Workers (UE), to a series of debates.

Carey offered to meet Fitzgerald on the platform of every city and town where a General Electric or Westinghouse plant is located to debate the issues between the rival unions.

Since the UE was ejected from the CIO last fall on the charge of following the Communist Party line, the newly-formed IUE has been contesting UE's right to represent the nation's electrical industry workers in bargaining.

Gens. Bradley, Kenney Differ On Early War

By The Associated Press

Two of the Nation's top military leaders appeared at odds last night on the imminence of World War III.

On Capitol Hill, Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) quoted Gen. Omar N. Bradley as saying he sees no danger of a "shooting war" with Russia in the near future.

In Buffalo, N. Y., Air Force Gen. George C. Kenney declared:

"The new D-day of a third world conflict might be much closer than we had thought."

Bradley's views were reported to newsmen by Senator Thomas after the joint chiefs of staff chairman testified before a Senate Appropriations subcommittee on the $13,500,000,000 national defense budget for fiscal 1951.

"General Bradley doesn't see any occasion for a shooting war immediately," Thomas said. "It was my impression from his testimony that we're not going to become involved in a hot war in the next two or three years."

But Thomas said it was obvious from the size of the military budget that "we're not taking things for granted."

General Kenney, addressing a Buffalo Junior Chamber of Commerce dinner, did not elaborate on why he thought war might be "much closer than we had thought." The wartime Far East Air Force commander now heads the Air University at Maxwell Air Base, Alabama. He said:

"If we go down to defeat in a struggle which daily seems more and more inevitable, we will live out our lives in an ant-like existence as robot slaves in a satellite state receiving its orders from a foreign dictator."

Of the Russians, he said, as soon as they get enough A-bombs to tempt them to an attack they will have the capability — operating from bases already in their possession—of hitting any point in the United States."

Hainan Attack Believed Near As Red Troops Leave Canton

Hongkong, March 15 (U.P.).—All Chinese Communist troops have left Canton for an undisclosed destination, dispatches from that city said today, giving rise to reports that the threatened invasion of Hainan Island is not far off.

The Communists have been concentrating troops and supplies in the port city before moving them to the vicinity of Liuchow Peninsula, which most observers believe will be the jumping-off place for the invasion.

Residents of Communist-occupied Canton also have been ordered to put in a 10-day supply of food, these reports said. There was no explanation of this. The order also said a daylight curfew may be imposed.

Reports from Hainan, off the South China coast, said fighting there between Nationalist troops and Red guerillas has heightened in intensity. The Nationalist goal is to wipe out the rebels to prevent them making contact with small Communist landing forces from the mainland.

These dispatches said the Nationalists are gaining the upper hand and many guerilla units are surrendering. There have been no further reports of landing, which have been described as Communist attempts to probe Nationalist strength.

all in China may know who would be responsible for all that such adventures would bring to them."

In addition to his warning, the Secretary made one new announcement in his speech. It was that the United States Government "is entirely willing" to have private Americans trade with Communist China—but only under strict conditions and controls.

"Trade requires certain standards of conduct," said the Secretary, breaking a long official silence on Chinese-American trading relations.

"Ships, planes and traders must be received under conditions of security and decency. Contracts must be honored. There must be some medium of exchange reasonably regulated."

He said the United States Government "does not propose that Americans should sell goods which may be used to harm us"—a clear intimation that export licenses would be denied to goods that would add to the Soviet war potential.

This Sunday, The Post will publish another special Gardening and Homemaking Section. Don't miss any of these magazine-size features coming up in The Sunday Post for the next seven weeks.

Moreover, the Secretary went on, the United States does not propose to give credits or gifts "to those who declare their hostility to us and all we stand for"—a clear statement that the day of government aid to China was over, except for the islands still under Nationalist control.

Don't Depend on China Trade

In reply to Communist propaganda that American capitalism needed Chinese markets, the Secretary said the United States was not trying to "thrust" trade upon the Chinese Communists, and could very well do without it.

"In the period 1946-1948 the United States supplied over 50 percent of China's imports and bought approximately a quarter of China's exports," he recalled. "Yet those same exports from America were less than 5 percent of our total exports and our purchases from China were a mere 2 percent of all we bought abroad.

"If the present rulers of China wish to believe that we depend on trade with China, we are entirely willing to leave it to the test of experience to prove whether they are right or wrong."

The tone of all this was stern, and it suggested that American trade policy would be strict, although it left the door open for considerable trade to meet the normal civilian requirements of Communist China.

Most of the Secretary's speech yesterday restated and condensed what he had said to the National Press Club on January 12. Again he pictured the present ferment in Asia as a revolution based partly on "revulsion against misery and poverty" and partly on "revulsion against foreign domination." Again he said China had fallen to communism because of the "inepti-tude and blindness" of the Nationalist government.

He scoffed at the 300 million dollars of Soviet aid promised to China over five years by the recent Soviet-Chinese treaty. He said the recent revaluation of the ruble might reduce the real value of this aid to about 45 million dollars a year, and he contrasted this with the 400 million dollars freely granted China by the American Congress in the single year 1948.

"China today faces a prospect of 40 million people suffering from hunger between now and the next crops," the Secretary said. "Millions may die. And yet, food moves from China to the Soviet Union."

No Specific Aid Program

The Secretary again stopped short of outlining a specific program of American help for the newly independent nations of southeast and southern Asia.

"The aid we extend," he said, "must be of a kind appropriate to a particular situation; it must be fitted into the responsibilities of others, and it must be within the prudent capabilities of our resources.

"In some situations it will be military assistance. In others, it may be grants or loans, such as the recent 100 million dollar credit to the Republic of the United States of Indonesia. In still other cases, the need may be for technical assistance."

And in every instance, he repeated, "our help can only reinforce the efforts which others are prepared to make on their own behalf."

Acheson's speech contained the first official American reference to the speech made March 9 by Percy C. Spender, Australia's new Minister of External Affairs. Spender jumped into world prominence recently with two proposals—one, to set up a consultative committee of Commonwealth governments for helping southeast Asia; the other, to put Australia's relations with the United States on the same frank and friendly basis as her dealings with other Commonwealth countries.

The Secretary did not mention either of these ideas, but said the Government here was "much interested" in Spender's March 9 speech. He especially commended Spender's formulation of six principles through which the free nations could avoid war and preserve their freedom.

Spender had said the democracies must (1) understand the true causes of present international tension, (2) realize that preservation of their own way of life calls for a sustained and determined effort in all fields, (3) accept the fact that appeasement is ineffective and dangerous, (4) put their own domestic houses in order, (5) cooperate in existing international agencies, and (6), as Acheson paraphrased it, "give thought to the creation of more effective methods of cooperative action in those areas where their vital interests are affected."

"From what I have said today about our own attitude toward the problems in Asia," Acheson said, "it is evident that we believe these points are soundly taken. We welcome the statement of them."

Army Recalls Lt. Col. L. E. Cox, Assistant D. C. Engineer Chief

Col. Cox

Orders from the Army assigning Cox to serve in Bremerhaven, Germany, were released at the District Building yesterday. He was authorized to take up to 45 days leave before reporting to a port of embarkation June 19.

Assigned here in August, 1947, Cox is the senior, in point of service, of the three assistants to Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner. He is in charge of the Department of Highways and the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

A successor is expected to be selected from the Corps of Engineers by the Army.

Cox, 36, an Alabaman, holds a master of science degree in civil engineering from Massachusetts Institute of Technology. During World War II, he served 2½ years in the China-Burma-India theater and won a Bronze Star.

Crime Committee To Study Bill Drafts

Justice Department drafts of antiracketeering legislation will be considered today and Friday by a committee set up by last month's national crime conference.

The two-day session at the Justice Department may have a bearing on whether the Senate will have a full-scale investigation into slot machines, race wire and bookmaking operations and other interstate activities of the tygoons, modern-day gambling syndicate chiefs.

Key committee set up by the crime conference was one on Federal legislation, headed by Mayor David Lawrence of Pittsburgh. Except for Lawrence and Miami's Mayor William M. Wolfarth, all 10 committee members are Federal officials.

This committee will go over drafts of such bills as those prohibiting interstate shipment of slot machines and banning use of interstate wire facilities to transmit horserace betting information.

Justice officials said last night they expect these and other bills will not be ready for Congress for another month, the deadline set by the crime conference.

But Senator Johnson (D., Colo.), chairman of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, said he expects drafts of the slot-machine and race-wire bills to be sent to the Hill within a few days.

Johnson said he hopes they will arrive before next Wednesday when the Senate Rules Committee is due to act on a jurisdictional row between Johnson and Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.), author of the proposal for a full-scale $100,000 Senate investigation into racketeering. Kefauver's resolution has the approval of the Judiciary Committee and is now before Rules.

A Rules subcommittee was named last week to look into the row. One member told The Washington Post yesterday he felt the committee would agree to recommend at least part of the $100,000 Kefauver is asking but would suggest putting the jurisdictional row up to the full Senate rather than the Rules Committee.

However, this member pointed out that if the two-day meeting results in quick approval of the two proposed bills and they are sent to the Hill early next week Johnson's hand will be strengthened because both bills will probably be referred to his committee instead of to Judiciary.

Johnson said yesterday the slot-machine bill should not require protracted consideration but the race-wire proposal might need "long and extensive" hearings. In reply to a reporter's question Johnson indicated the race-wire bill hearings would not bring to Washington such figures as Frank Costello, often called the No. 1 Tygoon.

Two Drivers Cleared in Road Deaths

Dr. Wolohon — Mrs. Guthrie
Cleared in traffic deaths
The Washington Post

Two drivers were exonerated yesterday in traffic-death inquests at the morgue with both deaths ruled accidents by a coroner's jury.

They are Mrs. Lee B. Guthrie, 56, of 4301 Argyle ter. nw., and Dr. Charles H. Wolohon, 55, a physician, of 500 Underwood st. nw.

Police said Mrs. Guthrie was driver of a car which struck Joseph Clarke Sims, 70, of 3300 16th st. nw., on February 10 at 16th and Park rd. nw. Sims died four hours after the accident.

Wolohon, police said, was driver of an automobile which struck Roland Summer Robbins, 70, at Piney Branch rd. and Sheridan st. nw., manager of the Trans-Lux Theater. Robbins died Monday.

"POPE PIUS XII, PRIEST AND STATESMAN" is appearing in newspapers all over the world. In Washington, you can read it in The Post. Read the first installment in this Sunday's Post.

Freedom Fair Awaits Rulings by McGrath

spending up to $10,000 for a survey of not more than four months (and probably not more than 60 days) to find out how much space business firms will buy and whether this will financially support the Fair. (All signs so far indicate industry will adequately support the project.)

Walter M. Bastian, Sesqui counsel, has said he believes the two legal moves can be made.

The executive committee report on the proposal, made public yesterday, said the private corporation would be authorized to use the name "Freedom Fair, Inc." The report recommended that the corporation be created "by a group of prominent Washington, D. C., citizens who are above reproach and whose participation would preclude any charge of improper motives or interest for personal gain and profit, and who would instill confidence in industry."

Precedents Noted

Federal law forbids Government agencies—and the Sesqui Commission is just that—to create corporations. The report's contention is that the proposed corporation "would not be an instrument of the commission but would be the corporate representative of the exhibitors" at the Fair. It also was noted that use of private corporations has been customary in other public celebrations of this character.

The commission made public a statement from President Truman, its ex-officio chairman, which referred to the fair's problems. He said:

"I hope that all these problems will soon be resolved; for the Freedom Fair can, by its demonstration of the growth of our Nation under free enterprise, do much to show to the world the strength of our institutions."

Two New Members Appointed

Because of legislative duties, two commission members—Senator Smith (R., Me.) and Representative Norton (D., N. J.)—were dropped from the executive committee. Their places were taken by Barron and Mrs. Philip L. Graham, wife of the publisher of The Washington Post.

Barron also confirmed reports that Massman's salary will be $25,000 a year. He said Edward Boykin, formerly Sesqui director, will remain as technical assistant to Massmann at his previous salary of $15,000.

A financial report showed that just over one million dollars of the three million dollar appropriated by Congress has been allocated, of which only about $42,500 has been for fair activities. Some $427,000 has been expended, most of it to help pay for the Rock Creek Park amphitheater. About two million dollars of the three million dollars appropriated would be used by the commission as a revolving fund to get the fair under way.

Crommelin Put On Furlough

being unfairly treated by the Pentagon High Command. Subsequently Denfeld was replaced by Sherman and Crommelin "banished" from Washington with a stinging public reprimand.

Toned Down Criticism

Just recently, the House Armed Services Comittee, which held the explosive probe, issued a lengthy report siding with the Navy to a considerable extent.

On the West Coast, Crommelin kept up his criticism, though toned down a bit following Sherman's direct order of last month. On March 7, for example, he said in an interview that the Army and Air Force are still trying to kill the Marine Corps.

Even his friends agreed that he was apparently "asking for" a court-martial. It was felt that he wanted the public forum that an open trial would provide for restatement of his criticism of the present order at the Pentagon.

The disciplinary action decided upon will not give him this speaking platform. "Sea lawyers" said last night, however, that precedents held that an officer could demand a court-martial if kept on furlough for more than six months.

Says He's Not Quitting

In San Francisco, Crommelin last night told a news conference, the Associated Press reported, that he had known the order was in the wind since January. He attributed it to the Army and Air Force General Staff Corps.

"I've been closing my range and getting a hit with every one of my salvos," he asserted.

"I have no intention of quitting or retiring from the Navy."

"I walked into this with my eyes open. I don't know just what my future policy will be. I want to study it and do what I consider the best for my country."

He told reporters: "If I ever start to quit, you will know I have been given the Cardinal Mindzenty treatment."

Friendship Group Backs Zone Changes

The Friendship Citizens Association last night approved two zoning changes scheduled for consideration today by the District Zoning Commission.

The organization by resolution approved a proposal to rezone as commercial property on the South side of Chesapeake st. nw., from 40th st. to Wisconsin ave., and on both sides of Brandywine st. nw., from 40th to 41st sts.

A green light also was given to a change in a zoning amendment affecting television station WOIC that would permit the station to have a standby studio at its transmitter site, 40th and Brandywine sts. nw.

Trinidad

Trinidad Citiens Association last night indorsed a five-day week for Metropolitan Police and urged appropriation of funds for the purpose. The group met in the Wheatley Elementary School with about 30 present.

Midway

Another indorsement for the 5-day, 40-hour-week came last night from the Midway Civic Association, meeting at the Morgan School, 18th and California sts. nw.

The group also went on record opposing any increase in transit fares. Malcolm T. Daniels presided.

North Cleveland Park . . .

Success in clearing the lot behind the People's Drug Store at Wisconsin and Albemarle sts. nw. for public parking was announced at last night's meeting of the North Cleveland Park Citizens Association.

Meeting at the Hearst School, Wisconsin ave. and Windom pl. nw., W. A. Gallahan, acting president, told the group that the National Capital Park and Planning Commission officials had finally declared it public property.

Road Mishaps Increase 20 in Week to 259

During the week beginning March 5 there were 259 traffic accidents in the District, 20 more than the previous week, a police report showed yesterday.

The weekly roundup released by Capt. Loraine T. Johnson of the Traffic Division showed 222 of the accidents happened to motor vehicles, only four involved streetcars, and pedestrians were caught in 33.

There was only one fatality, death of a 64-year-old man injured in traffic on February 1.

Stebbins, 79, Is Acquitted Of Assault

Samuel A. Stebbins, 75, has been acquitted of simple assault and threats charges brought by his 49-year-old wife.

Mrs. Stebbins had charged her spouse swung a chair at her and threatened her.

Stebbins, who was unsuccessful in efforts to obtain a divorce from his wife last January, told a Municipal Court jury Tuesday that Mrs. Stebbins threatened him with a chair after a period of name calling at their home 5426 MacArthur blvd. nw.

George L. Sitton Elected Head of Railroad Group

George L. Sitton, of Washington, assistant chief engineer of the Southern Railway System, yesterday was elected president of the American Railway Engineering Association at the organization's 49th annual meeting in Chicago.

Sitton

Sitton, 62, has been with Southern Railway since 1907. He is married and lives at 3409 Fulton st. nw Too ill to attend the meeting yesterday, his election nonetheless was confirmed.

Other new officers of the railroad group are Henry S. Loeffler, St. Paul, Minn., senior vice president, and Tom A. Blair, Chicago, junior vice president.

2 School Patrolmen Awarded Bravery Medals by Barkley

Two Washington area school safety patrolmen whose alert action saved children from death or serious injury received medals yesterday from Vice President Barkley.

The medals were given to Barbara Jacobs, 10, of 11701 Galt ave., Wheaton Mills, Md., a student at the Glenmont School, Silver Spring, and Richard L. Allen, 11, of 4400 Georgia ave. nw., a student at Petworth School.

Each received a bronze medal for meritorious service awarded by the District Division of the American Automobile Association. The presentation was in Mr. Barkley's office.

Montgomery County police submitted the report that won a citation for Barbara. Last November 2, when a school bus stopped at Granview and Arcola drives, Silver Spring, to discharge children, she alighted first to see that they got safely across the street.

Barbara saw a car approaching rapidly and it was evident to her the driver was not going to stop behind the school bus as required by law.

Sylvia Serafino, 6, of 11612 Granview dr., had started to cross. Barbara grabbed her arm and pulled her to safety as the car raced over the spot where the younger child had been walking.

Metropolitan police reported that Safety Patrolman Richard Allen performed a similar meritorious action last October 4, while on patrol duty at the noon hour at the crossing of New Hampshire ave., and 7th and Sheperd sts. nw.

James Corso, 8, of 529 Quincy st. nw., a student at St. Gabriel's Parochial School, ran by Richard's outstretched arms. With his right hand, Richard pulled the boy to safety from the path of a car whose driver came to a stop over the spot where the boy had been.

Committee to Consider Spencer Appointment

The Senate District Committee is scheduled to meet at 11 a. m. today to consider the nomination of Kenneth W. Spencer to the Public Utilities Commission and legislation to make daylight saving time a permanent fixture here every summer.

The group may also take up a half dozen minor local measures passed by the House Monday.

GU Professor Gets Legion of Merit

Dr. Murray C. Copeland, professor of oncology at the Georgetown University Medical School, yesterday was awarded the Legion of Merit for service as Army surgeon from July, 1942, to May, 1944.

The presentation was made in the faculty lounge of the medical school by Maj. Gen. Charles F. Thompson, U. S. A. (ret.), under whom Dr. Copeland served in the South Pacific with the rank of colonel.

$2.5 Million For Quantico Housing Asked

Another salvo in the battle to get better housing for the Marines at Quantico was fired yesterday with submission of a $2,476,000 living quarters project to the House Armed Services Committee.

The project was brought in by Maj. Gen. W. P. T. Hill, Marine Corps quartermaster general, at the specific request of the committee.

Calling for 150 new units at the Quantico base, where some Marines are living in places of chicken-coop quality, the project was prepared as an amendment to a $477,974,410 military housing bill. A similar bill has already passed the Senate. The Quantico amendment possibly will be considered by the House committee today.

The committee also received a Defense Department request yesterday for $187,142,770 more for high-priority military projects, including the following three in this area:

Army Medical Center, reconstruction of heating plants, $350,000.

Naval Air Test Center, Patuxent River, Md., $1,110,000 for installation of catapult and arresting gear.

Camp Detrick, Md., where biological warfare research is conducted, six million dollars in addition to $3,313,500 previously requested.

The Quantico amendment had been requested last month by Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House committee following an article in The Washington Post

Ban Relaxed To Let Chief Rejoin Tribe

London, March 15 (AP).—The British Labor government edged back today from the hornet's nest stirred up by its exiling of Seretse Khama.

Prime Minister Attlee ruled that the Oxford-educated chief of the Bamangwatos may return to his African homeland until Seretse's white wife bears the child she expects in June.

Attlee made this concession at a meeting of angry Laborite members of Parliament. He rejected their demands that the government cancel completely its orders banishing Seretse and his wife, the former Ruth Williams of London, from arid Bechuanaland for five years.

The Labor MPs were reported to have accused their leaders of pandering to the color prejudices of the all-white governments of South Africa and Southern Rhodesia, neighbors of Bechuanaland.

Attlee and his Minister of Commonwealth Relations, Patrick Gordon-Walker, denied the charges.

Instead they claimed overwhelming justification for their action. Qualified informants said they based their argument chiefly on grounds that Seretse is not a "fit and proper person" to rule the 100,000-strong Bamangwato tribe.

Seretse's own views on the British concession was not available, but one of his aides told a reporter: "Let's hear what strings there are to the offer."

In fact, certain British terms will be laid down:

Seretse will be allowed to return at the discretion of the British high commissioner in South Africa, Sir Evelyn Baring.

He'll have to promise not to take part in any politics while he's home.

He and his wife must leave when their baby is born.

Liberal Party Demurs

The Liberal Party's nine-man team in Commons tonight presented a motion saying the house:

"Views with deep uneasiness the treatment accorded to Seretse Khama, regrets the report of the judicial inquiry (into his election as chief) has not been published, and urges the government to reconsider both the publication of the report and the decision to exclude Seretse Khama from his chieftainship for a period of five years."

The judicial commission found that Seretse enjoys the support of the overwhelming majority of his people.

Tories' Push May Not Come Until Fall

London, March 15 (AP).—Winston Churchill may wait until fall before making a really big effort to unseat the Labor government.

His strategy became clearer today after Labor had survived its third skirmish with his Conservatives in the new House of Commons.

Conservative sources declared Churchill had only been needling the government and his effort was short of all out.

But he is keeping Prime Minister Attlee's thin majority of six under pressure until he considers the time right for a big attack.

Many Conservatives, Laborites and Liberals admit that a decisive defeat of the Labor government, which would mean new elections, would embarrass all parties just now.

The House is considering money bills. It must pass a budget next month for the 1950-51 fiscal year to keep the government machinery running. An election would interfere.

The February election campaign also left the major parties short of funds. They need time to rebuild their finances and political machines.

Conservative guesses as to when Churchill will attempt his big push range from June to October to next February. Most of them center around the autumn. The summer is considered unlikely. Politicians point out it is a bad time to electioneer. Many persons are on vacation, particularly the middle classes both major parties are wooing.

Bottles Up

If there is any "literary" or "social uplift" aspect about the after-hours bottle clubs flourishing in Washington, it must be hidden under the counter. United States Attorney Fay has ample justification for his move to dissolve the charters of 11 such clubs on the ground that they are actually selling liquor to the general public and are operating under a subterfuge. If the House District Committee investigating crime in Washington has produced no other tangible results, it has helped focus attention on how the bottle clubs are abusing their charters. Lieut. Roy Blick of the Police Vice Squad estimates that 40 percent of the 103 chartered bottle clubs here are operating illegally and Mr. Fay has signified his intention of proceeding against 29 more.

The trouble is that under the District code there is nothing to prevent bottle clubs dissolved one day from obtaining new charters the next. Obviously this loophole in the District law makes enforcement almost futile. At the very least, the law ought to provide for penal action against operators who abuse the law and for denial of new charters to operators whose previous charters have been revoked for cause. Beyond this, the widespread misuse of the law ought to occasion a reexamination of the intent of the law itself. It has been said that an extension of public drinking hours to 2 a. m. Sundays would force most of the bottle clubs to close. The House now has turned down such an extension in a vote that seems to have had little relation to the merit of the issue. The question that remains is whether this law is out of keeping with actual mores, and by encouraging evasion is promoting disrespect for all law.

Gas Barrage

Proponents of the Kerr natural gas bill scheduled to come up today in the Senate are trying to have their cake and eat it too. They contend that this bill, which would amend the Natural Gas Act specifically to exempt so-called independent gas producers from Federal Power Commission regulation, would not take away any of the jurisdiction that the FPC now possesses. If that were the case, why would there be any need for a bill of exemption?

Natural gas producers are of two kinds—the producers affiliated with pipeline companies, clearly under FPC regulation, and the independents. "Independent" in this sense is something of a misnomer. Although there are many small producers, a few large companies do most of the business, and some of the largest operators are oil companies. The authority of the FPC to regulate sales by independent producers destined for interstate commerce was affirmed by the Supreme Court in the Interstate case in 1947. It is true that the FPC has not actively regulated such sales in the past—principally because prices were not unreasonable—but it has not relinquished jurisdiction. Indeed, it is now using this authority in price proceedings against the Phillips Petroleum Co.

Senator Kerr, among others, has admitted that a prime purpose in his bill is to facilitate increased prices. Yet there is no reason to believe that present prices, or the fair rate of return contemplated by the FPC, are discouraging enterprise; far from it. It may be suspected that another purpose of the Kerr bill is to remove gas as an active competitor of oil, which is unregulated. Since 1947 there has been a tremendous increase in the use of natural gas in cities (Washington, for example), and conditions have changed from a buyers' to a sellers' market. The effect of the Kerr bill would be to let large producers set the price all along the line to consumers. Not only would this discriminate against regulated pipeline companies and affiliated producers, it would render all gas regulations more or less futile.

Aside from price protection, one essential purpose of regulation is to prevent the growth of monopoly among producers. A case can be made that the really small producers should be exempted from regulation. Also, it is undeniable that a great deal of confusion exists over what Congress actually intended in the Natural Gas Act, and a more specific law would be desirable. But a time when natural gas regulation is taking on increasing importance is no time to be removing a fundamental protection which, once lifted, could be restored only with the greatest difficulty. Senators ought to take a very close look at the very large special interest that is masquerading today in the guise of free enterprise.

Maritime Shuffle

President Truman's long-heralded reorganization of the Maritime Commission is both drastic and plausible in many ways. The danger is that the President may be misled into believing that the trouble in the Maritime Commission will be cured by a mere reshuffling of authority. Whatever the administrative defects of the present commission, and they are many, the basic difficulty has been in the outlook of its members.

What the President proposes is to abolish the commission and divide its duties functionally as recommended by the Hoover Commission and other studies. Replacing the present five-member body, a three-man Maritime Board would be set up in the Department of Commerce to handle regulatory and subsidy functions. With respect to ship construction and operating subsidy determination, this board would be subject to policy guidance from the Secretary of Commerce; but its decisions, once made, would be conclusive. In such regulatory matters as approval of rates the board would act as an independent agency.

To carry out other duties of the Maritime Commission — administration of subsidies, management of the Government-owned merchant fleet and similar functions aggregating 162 million dollars yearly—the plan would establish a separate Maritime Administration in the Department of Commerce. Separate, that is, except for the fact that the chairman of the Maritime Board would serve in a dual capacity as Maritime Administrator. In addition, the plan calls for the appointment of a new Undersecretary of Commerce for Transportation.

Insofar as it would bring about policy accountability on subsidy awards, the proposal would be a distinct improvement. The granting of subsidies is basically an executive function, and when this function is carried out by an independent agency great abuse is possible. The plan would permit supervision to insure that presidential subsidy policy and maritime policy were not operating at cross-purposes. Moreover, the plan recognizes the overlap of many maritime functions by providing for the use of the same staff by the Maritime Board and the Maritime Administration.

The question remains, however: How many ways can the same man be divided? Can an administrator responsible to the Secretary of Commerce in some matters remain genuinely independent in others? For that matter, would not the dual Maritime Board-Administration head be in a position to thwart other board members, since all employes except personal staffs would be responsible to him alone? That has been one of the major complaints under the most recent reorganization of the Maritime Commission. Finally, if a Department of Transportation is the President's aim, ought not this issue to be met head-on? Should the already unyielding Department of Commerce be made more so?

Although the President's message does not mention it, undoubtedly a major factor in the shift was the report last summer by the Comptroller General dealing with the way the Maritime Commission majority had flouted the law in granting excessive subsidies—a report confirmed by the House Executive Expenditures Committee. If the reorganization plan is accepted, the President has a great opportunity to get rid of the commission members who have abused their offices. This gain would be nullified, however, if the President (as is now reported to be his intention) were to appoint as Undersecretary of Commerce for Transportation the present Maritime Commission chairman who has sided with the majority. By the same token it would be unfair to jettison Commissioner Raymond S. McKeough, who has fought a losing battle to administer the law as written.

No reorganization plan can be stronger than the men chosen to administer it. In peculiar measure the chaos in the Maritime Commission is the result of incompetence. Far more important than the details of the reorganization plan, if it goes through, will be for the President to name as Undersecretary of Commerce a man specially qualified in the field of transportation and to appoint as Maritime Administrator and board members men who have demonstrated that they can distinguish public from private interest.

Asian Policy

Secretary Acheson began his speaking tour in the West with a strong attack in San Francisco yesterday on Soviet policy in Asia. It was evidently aimed at fomenting Chinese disillusionment with the Soviet connection. Newspaper reports have it that this disillusionment is growing apace. China is a Malthusian country, where population is constantly pressing upon the means of subsistence, and there is a paucity of natural resources. The country has been further impoverished by continuous war and the arrival of famine conditions in the Yangtze provinces. Certainly Russia is in no position to help China either to remedy her deficiency or to make much of a contribution to Chinese reconstruction. On the contrary, Russia is bent upon draining the Chinese economy, especially the rich economy of Manchuria. As Mr. Acheson said, even the relatively puny 300-million-dollar credit provided for in the recent Sino-Russian agreement has already been cut down by a fourth by the ruble revaluation.

Secretary Acheson insists that American policy in the Orient is not merely anti-communism: "We are not and must not allow ourselves to appear merely negative," he says, "even though that negation is directed against the most corrupting force now operating in the world." The positive element in the Acheson speech is his reiteration of what the United States can do for China (and the countries of southeastern Asia) in commerce and other help under Point IV. But, as he warns, "trade requires certain standards of conduct. Ships, planes and traders must be received under conditions of security and decency. Contracts must be honored. There must be some medium of exchange reasonably regulated." This last sentence will catch the eye of the Far Easterner. It was the Silver Purchase Act of 1934 that effectively killed the exchange system of China. This rested upon silver as the standard of value. The United States has some reparation to make in this respect, and nothing would hasten Chinese disillusionment with Moscow more than the declaration of a policy to aid China, other things being equal, to restore its currency system out of our immense and useless surplus of silver.

Belgian King

It is now reported that the Christian Social Premier of Belgium, Gaston Eyskens, is urging the King of the Belgians to abdicate. His position hitherto had been obscure, for it was his own party that led the fight for restoration. Apparently he realizes that the return of Leopold would be at the expense of national unity. A 57 percent vote merely gives Leopold title as King of 57 percent of the Belgians, and from the moment he resumed the throne, the King would be the football of domestic politics. From such a situation all loyal Belgians may well shrink. Nor is the matter a purely national interest. It is of deep concern in America—that so soon after an election in Britain which has turned the House of Commons into an arena of sham battle Belgium should be in danger of inviting a totally unnecessary schism. Neither situation is conducive to any attack on the problems which all the members of the free world have in common.

Leopold is so obdurate that the Premier has asked some of the members of the Christian Social and Liberal coalition government to buttress his pressure. The reason for the monarch's position is easy to understand. His reputation still suffers from the rash and unjust accusations brought against him by the political leaders of France and Great Britain after his surrender of his arms to the Germans in the spring of 1940. Yet Leopold's conduct in those dark days has been vindicated by the published papers of the late Lord Keyes, who served as British liaison officer at the King's headquarters. The truth of the matter now appears to be that so far from abandoning the Allies, he was abandoned by them. Leopold's conduct after the surrender and during the Nazi occupation, however, is another matter. Aside from his remarriage while so many of his people were forcibly separated from their wives, he remained entirely passive. And if he did not collaborate actively with the Germans, neither did he aid or encourage the underground opposition to them. That is the reason that although he remains King de jure, it was his brother Charles acting as regent who was asked to be the head of state after the liberation. Leopold's choice would not be difficult if there were less resentment, stubbornness and ego in his composition.

Blow To Education

Defeat of the Thomas bill in the House Education and Labor Committee is a misfortune. It means, simply, that because of the great religious controversy over the way Federal aid to education should be administered, the aid program itself has been killed. In this respect the often irrational pressure for and against the Barden bill, which would have forbidden any benefits to parochial schools in such matters as transportation, has reacted against the Thomas bill to paralyze all assistance. The Thomas bill, which has passed the Senate, would have left to the States themselves the determination of how Federal funds were to be spent within the areas declared constitutional by the Supreme Court. That is what this newspaper supported.

The aid-to-education debate soon got far off the main issue when the religious question was raised. That issue is the grave need for some sort of help, especially in the poorer States, where school facilities that for years have been subnormal are strained to the breaking point by growing enrollments and insufficient teachers. The real tragedy is that there is a large measure of agreement on the need. How, now, to satisfy it? At the very least the defeat ought to spur the separate congressional effort to grant funds for school construction. If the whole church and state issue must be settled before there can be aid to education, millions of young Americans are going to suffer for the inflexibility or fright or ignorance of their elders.

LINCOLN MEMORIAL AFTER DARK

More truly than by day, he comes alive
Now when the night has swallowed street and park,
And all his grief and ruggedness survive
In light which lifts him from enfolding dark.
Grandeur of marble in a Nation's shrine
Cannot convey the greatness of his heart,
Nor man made tomb or cenotaph confine
A spirit solitary and apart.
Yet in the dark abyss of time, he stands
Outlined immortally in memory's glow,
Striking the shackles from uplifted hands,
Breathing compassion for his country's woe
The Union he revered remembers him
With love the night of ages cannot dim.

Health Drives

The campaign of the Heart Association is virtually complete. This will give way to another drive against a different health menace.

As a result of this publicity, all too many people have an apprehensive feeling that serious diseases are on the increase. Part of this feeling may be traced to the efforts of the public relations people who have outdone themselves in the educational and fund raising campaigns currently employed by the many diverse organizations fighting the public health menaces of heart disease, polio, cancer, TB, arthritis and a host of others. It is perhaps true that the statistics may actually show increasing evidence of certain of these diseases, but this can be explained, at least in part, by improved diagnostic techniques, the use of highly effective antibiotics in combating formerly high mortality rate infectious diseases, and the consequent increased longevity of the population.

The fight against these diseases is necessary and must continue. However, I am concerned by the year round barrage of high pressure publicity campaigns on behalf of these worthy causes themselves lay the foundation for a mental health menace.

The people must be educated in the nature of these diseases to the extent necessary for their protection; they should be urged to contribute funds for research and treatment as long as sufficient public funds are not available. But let those responsible authorities who organize and direct these public spirited campaigns prevail over their publicity staffs to eliminate the fear provoking appeal even if it should mean—and I doubt this—fewer contributions.

If instead of a series of campaigns run in sequence throughout the year, we could manage to unify the campaigns into one (much as the Community Chest) we could devote one month of the year to brooding about the many unpleasant ends we may come to, and spend the other months of the year taking good health for granted.

Acheson's Prescription

I have just read Ferdinand Kuhn's March 10 account of Mr. Acheson's off-the-record speech before a meeting of the Advertising Council February 16.

In brief, Mr. Acheson said "the only way to deal with the Soviet Union, we have found from hard experience, is to create situations of strength. Wherever the Soviet detects weakness or disunity—and it is quick to detect them—it exploits them to the full."

Against the threat of the Soviet "imperialistic system," he said that America must "be prepared to meet wherever possible all threats of the Soviet Union," and "to create those economic, political, social, and psychological conditions that strengthen and create confidence in the democratic way of life."

He was confident that unity and determination among the free nations would lead ultimately to working agreements with the Russians. He said further: "the non-Communist countries together have two-thirds of the world's population, three-fourths of the world's economic productive power, and a potential preponderance of the world's military power.

They have the highest standard of living and the greatest ability to help underdeveloped areas achieve higher standards of living. They have on their side the appeal of independence and of national loyalties. They have the greatest attraction of all—human freedom."

How is one to reconcile all this with the State Department's coolness toward the Atlantic Union resolution? Does it not seek an exploration of ways and means of creating "those economic, political, social, and psychological conditions that strengthen and create confidence in the democratic way of life" of which Mr. Acheson spoke? Would it not be a good first step in curing the "weakness or disunity" among democratic forces—the exploitation of which is the obvious reason for the success of the Soviet "imperialistic system" to date?

New Stars In The Flag

The article "How Assemble 50?" in your issue of March 12 was of interest to me and I have my suggestion to make. Forty-nine stars can be arranged so that our flag will look very much as it does now. But it seems impossible to arrange 50 stars in a field with the proportions to which we are accustomed without making some radical change in arrangement.

I propose if, and when, we do get our fiftieth State, that we admit that for all practical purposes 50 stars are too many for our flag and that we go back to the circle of 13 stars on the flag used by the original 13 States.

Undermining The FBI

Recently J. Edgar Hoover testified before Congress and told how some previous sideshows, although inclusive of some substance, had seriously injured the system of FBI contacts inside Communist operations.

Republican Ferguson might now be in a position to give some sound advice to Republican McCarthy, after hearing Hoover's testimony.

I hope that such advice would recommend that McCarthy turn over to the FBI any information he thinks is significant, and I would hope that the State Department would turn over any files it may have to the FBI also. Then it can be left to Hoover to decide how the information should be used.

Criticism Of Byrnes

The fact that James F. Byrnes, former Secretary of State, will be a target for criticism (according to an article in your March 12 issue) in symbolizing leadership for the Dixiecrats if he is elected South Carolina's Governor should not bother him.

After such distinguished service in State, national and international affairs, Byrnes has manfully weathered criticism before.

It's true that Byrnes, as a politician and national leader, has nothing to gain in a position such as Governor of South Carolina, but on the other hand he is the type of unselfish, experienced leader that South Carolina—and many other States of the 48—needs for a Governor.

And it is not unfortunate that certain Democratic leaders are unable to withstand—and accept—criticism as well as Byrnes?

Virginia Poll Tax Fiasco

Both those who are emotionally alarmed over "Federal interference with States' rights," and those who seek to objectively explain the trend toward increased reliance on the National Government can inform themselves by looking at the current Virginia example of frustration at the State level. This story of efforts to abolish the voter poll tax must have many parallels in other fields in all the other States.

About the time Capitol Hill began to talk about national legislation to abolish the poll tax in the little handful of Southern States still maintaining such restrictions on voting, the Virginia Legislature decided it had better appoint a commission to look into the Virginia law.

Recommendations of this commission were drafted into the compound and complex Campbell amendments. While the amendments did outlaw the $1.50 tax as a voting requirement, they retained the idea of a straight capitation tax with possible increase to $3, and tied on a long kite tail of other unpalatable and questionable provisions.

Further, to get rid of the poll tax by amendment to the Virginia constitution was a long process; the Campbell amendments had to be passed by the General Assembly in 1946, again, without change, in 1948, and were not to be submitted to the people for ratification for still another year.

As the November, 1949, voting date approached, criticism of the amendments increased; and, in equal ratio, rose the cries of Virginia officials that, despite their faults, the amendments must be ratified to forestall the "danger" of Federal action. In addition to being a "direct invasion" of States' rights, Federal abolition of the poll tax as a requirement for voting for national officials would conflict with Virginia law for election of local and State officials, and great confusion would result. So ran the argument. The Campbell amendments, however, were rejected at the polls.

In the just-closed session of the Virginia Assembly four measures for constitutional amendment were introduced—all somewhat similar, all more clearcut than the Campbell amendments, and from which an acceptable compromise amendment could have been quickly worked out.

These were referred, quite early in the session to the joint committee on privileges and elections. The committee sat on the measures until Friday morning of the last week in which either house could take up new legislation.

Late as it was, friends of repeal in the House rallied forces and with parliamentary tactics pulled a measure through the House. Though this came too late for the Legislature as a whole, much less the general public to properly evaluate it, it had two obvious faults; it would have restricted registration of new voters to three months of the year, and it included the same controversial Campbell amendment provision for a $3 capitation tax not tied to voting.

Far from ideal though this measure was, advocates of repeal were willing to accept it rather than wait for another proposal to run the Assembly gauntlet in 1952, again in 1954, and to come into effect at the earliest in 1955. Two days before closing, the House passed it, and rushed it to the Senate. There on Saturday, last scheduled day, it was killed in committee, by five to four.

And so the famous $1.50 question remains how badly must the big bad Washington wolf frighten little Virginia in order to get a decent repeal bill through the Assembly in 1952.

Kerr Natural Gas Proposal

A Communication

THE PRESS from Washington has carried several attacks against Senator Kerr keyed to his espousal of certain amendments of the Natural Gas Act of 1938. The Kerr bill seeks only to preserve by law the right of an independent producer of gas—operating at arm's length from a pipe line or distributing company—to make a contract for the sale of gas from his own wells without regulation of any Federal agency.

The bill, if enacted into law, will not, per se, increase the price of gas, either in the field or at the consumer level. Under the present law, the Federal Power Commission has not claimed and never has exercised the right to control the price at which gas "in the field" is sold to the pipe line. The price has under the present law increased from 3 and 4 cents per thousand cubic feet to 6 cents in many fields and in some instances to as much as 10 cents a thousand cubic feet, with step-up provisions beyond these prices for future years. What the Kerr bill seeks is to confirm the present practice: the right of a producer to sell gas "at arm's length" at the best price the seller can obtain and which the buyer is willing to pay.

Oil and gas production are part of our free enterprise system. Unless there is nationalization or confiscation, or unless the business is by an irrational philosophy decided to be a public utility, there is no place for price fixing in that industry. Natural gas is not a monopoly. There are many fields producing gas which have no markets today. It is available to buyers.

CITY gas plants are not dependent upon natural gas. In the Eastern seaboard, practically every large city has contracted for and is clamoring for a larger share of available natural gas for one reason: it is cheaper than artificial or manufactured gas produced from coal or oil.

Gas companies taking on natural gas generally maintain their plants in working condition, against emergencies. Many continue to produce gas and blend their low BTU gas with natural gas. If gas should unreasonably be advanced in price, the buyer could reduce his "take" and manufacture a larger proportion of his requirements. But that is not in the cards because purchase contracts are set up for long periods, generally 20 years. Certainly if fuel oil was to drop to the prices of a year ago or even lower, and gas could be manufactured at a lower cost than natural gas can be obtained, natural gas lines would get no new customers, and would be held to minimum deliveries by old ones.

Hitherto the producing end of the natural gas industry did not have to worry about the prospect of the Federal Power Commission fixing or limiting the price of gas at the well. Even today, with a tremendous market, gas in the field is generally underpriced, often brings 3 or 4 cents under "life of lease" contracts entered into many years ago. As a result, the regulatory authorities in the States of Oklahoma and Kansas have established by law or regulation a price of 7 and 8 cents, respectively, as the minima to be paid at the well. The courts are to test the validity of these steps. The writer does not applaud this means of obtaining an equitable price for gas.

THE dispatches argue that a 6 percent profit set for utilities ought to be enough for a natural gas producer, that such a profit would content other industries. It is one thing to be content with 6 percent profit but quite another to have it fixed by the Government. As to the oil and gas industry, price fixing at the well is not sound. The critics apparently do not understand the hazards of drilling for oil and gas. Dry holes and poor wells must be paid for out of income of those wells which produce. The law of supply and demand should determine the price.

I wonder whether the dispatches referring to "closing the loophole which permits oil and gas drillers and mining companies to charge off excessive depletion allowances" give the correct picture. The provisions in the present Federal income tax laws governing "depletion and the charge of intangible development costs as expense have been worked out by Congress over a period of years as equitable and economical means of providing the necessary incentive for petroleum development that is indispensable to national welfare and security."

The Kerr bill seeks to give the approval of Congress to the historical practice in the industry so that a basically sound business philosophy might not be overturned at the whim of a commission, when chance changes the political or economic complexion of that commission. So basic a change, if ever made, should be in the purview of the Congress and not in the power of one of its creatures.

"I Like To Pay Taxes"

I think Malvina Lindsay's March 11 column was excellent. I like her quotation from Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes: "Young man, I like to pay taxes. They're my investment in civilization." If everyone adopted this attitude, American people would be a lot happier.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Coming Encounter

WE ARE on the eve, it is now reasonably certain, of another and very important diplomatic encounter with the Soviet Union. The initiative has come from Moscow, indeed from Stalin himself, and its immediate object is to bring about a discussion of his theory of co-existence—that is to say, of the theory that the two systems, though ultimately irreconcilable, can exist in the same world without settling their conflict by war.

Lippmann

THE THEORY itself is not a new one. Stalin personally has advanced it repeatedly in private communications and in public interviews, notably in the one with Mr. Stassen in 1947. But not since the breakup of the alliance after Yalta have the other Soviet leaders and the government propaganda machine as a whole made such a concerted effort to present Stalin's doctrine as Soviet policy. This phase began with the grandiose celebration of Stalin's birthday when the doctrine of co-existence was a principal theme in much of the oratory.

About a month ago the Moscow censorship took deliberate measures in its treatment of the series of Salisbury dispatches to the New York Times to call attention to this theme. It may have been a mere coincidence that this happened in the very week when first Mr. Eden and then Mr. Churchill introduced the idea into the British election campaign. But it was at least an interesting coincidence.

Then came the Soviet plebiscite, which ended, contrary to the usual practice, without a published address by Stalin himself but with several speeches,—notably one by the rigidly orthodox Molotov. There for the first time Stalin's chief lieutenants and most probable successors went publicly on record for the doctrine which has hitherto been regarded as personal to Stalin rather than as canonical.

THIS ELABORATE and concerted build-up has given such emphasis to the formula of co-existence that a refusal to explore it is not practical politics in any of the principal non-Communist countries. The Atlantic nations, to which the Stalin formula is addressed, will explore it. They are in fact exploring it now, and, as events will show, the business of developing a satisfactory and convincing Western position will have high priority in the meetings this spring of the Atlantic nations and of the Big Three.

MR. CHURCHILL certainly recognized the ultimate reality of the issue when he said in effect that the alternative to co-existence is a war of extermination. No Western government, therefore, can or will reject the general idea of peaceful co-existence. The task of the exploration will be to find out what are the concrete terms in which the Soviet believes in co-existence and on what concrete terms the West would believe in it. An exploration of this kind, we must be careful to note, is not a negotiation. It has nothing to do with a Truman-Stalin meeting, or with another Council of Foreign Ministers, or with some sort of theatrical diplomatic congress.

An exploration is a feeling out of the issues which might eventually be negotiated. If it is wisely and expertly conducted, it will be carried on both by the exchange of official statements and through diplomatic channels. It has to be done coldly, shrewdly, suspiciously—without great expectations but with a sense of history—which teaches us that the co-existence of great conflicting systems is not at all impossible or unusual but that it is never achieved quickly, neatly, decisively, conclusively or pleasantly.

THE CRUCIAL question will be, I believe, the character of the frontier between the two systems. To this question there are in principle and in practice two and only two general answers.

The one is to attempt to fix the line of separation where it now exists—at the iron curtain—with the two coalitions in direct military contact in the heart of Germany and Austria, and indeed across the sidewalks of Berlin. This is an impossible, intolerable, and increasingly dangerous arrangement, and no peaceful co-existence is imaginable so long as its continues. There can be no kind of peace in Europe and in the world if there are two German states—the one a Soviet satellite and the other a Western satellite. An attempt to co-exist on these terms would mean inevitably a civil war in Germany which would become a world war.

THE ALTERNATIVE is to establish by agreement a neutralized buffer belt of nations between the Soviet system and the principal Atlantic powers. This would mean a reunited Germany, rearmed for its own internal defense, committed by treaty and by its own constitution to a policy of neutrality and disentanglement, and then evacuated by the occupying powers. A neutralized Germany would be the nucleus—and it could be a strong nucleus—of a buffer belt which would include Austria, Switzerland, Italy, the Scandinavian countries, Yugoslavia and Greece.

Under these conditions co-existence in conceivable because the two systems would be separated. The two systems might hope to exist peaceably if their forces were not in direct and immediate contact, struggling to take possession of or to hold onto the contested area of central Europe. If between them there were broad territories and vigorous nations which had a vital interest—the interest of surviving and of prospering—in not being captured or absorbed into either military coalition, there would be a prospect of peaceful co-existence.

THE DIFFICULTIES and the risks of such a compromise may be too great for the world as it is today—for the harrassed and weary men who would have to work it out. But it is, I believe, the only objective of policy which is in accord with the vital interests of the Germans and of the other peoples who now find themselves defenseless and menaced between the two great military systems.

If, therefore, we met the Soviet initiative by proposing the neutralization of a reunited Germany and the recognition of a buffer belt, we should have, I believe, a policy which Stalin might accept. And if he did not accept it, such a policy would nevertheless enlist the support of the great masses of the people of Europe. For this is the future they really want. Were we to make it our purpose, we could answer conclusively all the accusations about our own imperialism, we could make ourselves convincingly, as alas we are not today, the champions of peace and of national freedom.

Acheson On A Limb

By Marquis Childs

Missing Democratic Support

SOME TIME ago it was stated in this space that there was no chance that the noisy campaign directed against Secretary of State Dean Acheson would drive him out of office. I believe that was true then. It is not true today.

Childs

Acheson is in a most curious position. What has happened is that Administration support for him on Capitol Hill simply has not been forthcoming. There is a worried feeling that he will be a distinct handicap in the coming elections.

Influential Democratic Senators put it this way. They say that Acheson deliberately climbed out on the Hiss limb with his statement that he would not turn his back on Alger Hiss. That made him a vulnerable target; so vulnerable that he cannot be defended by those who must themselves come before the voters in November.

One may reflect that this has certain implications in timidity and lack of stamina. But nevertheless it is a fact which inquiry on Capitol Hill quickly brings to light. So these powerful Democrats are watching Acheson on his limb. If he should decide to hop off, they would feel greatly relieved. They are confident that if President Truman should name Averell Harriman, now director of ECA aid in Europe, as his successor, Harriman could be readily confirmed.

At the same time they know the President will not deliberately saw off the limb on which his Secretary of State is sitting. The President has a fierce and almost primitive loyalty, particularly to any associate who is under fire. But the degree of warmth for Acheson within the Administration itself has not been exactly torrid.

THE REPUBLICAN attack on Acheson continues on a number of levels. The national focus is here in Washington, but it is also being prosecuted vigorously in the States.

Take Illinois as an example. Former Congressman Everett Dirksen is almost certain to be the Republican nominee opposing Senator Scott Lucas, majority leader in the Senate. While it has received far less publicity, in some ways this contest ranks with that in Ohio, where the reelection of Senator Robert A. Taft has been given No. 1 billing by the Republicans.

Dirksen at one time professed to be a convert to international cooperation. On one occasion almost single-handedly he beat back an attempt to sabotage the ECA appropriation. But Dirksen has reverted to isolationism and embraced with almost embarrassing eagerness the Chicago Tribune line.

In speeches around the State day after day he is attacking Acheson for his friendship with Hiss and for what he charges is a pro-Communist bias in the conduct of foreign policy. Undoubtedly, this has contributed to the mail hostile to Acheson that is pouring into Lucas' office. Included in this mail are petitions bearing hundreds of signatures demanding the resignation or the impeachment of the Secretary.

A GOOD BIT of this may be put down to carefully organized propaganda. The signers of such petitions are probably for the most part dyed-in-the-wool Republicans who never voted for any Democratic candidate and who abhor the Fair Deal and all its works.

Nevertheless, it is not hard to see how they would produce a queasy feeling in a candidate facing a tough struggle. Though the Republicans were disastrously routed in 1948 in Illinois as the voters revolted against the antics of Gov. Dwight Green in Springfield and Senator C. Wayland Brooks' isolationism in Washington, Lucas will not have an easy time of it.

Whatever may be in his mind, Acheson is carrying on as though he had the most secure position possible. It is a tribute both to his conscientiousness and to his poise. The speeches he is making on his present tour were very carefully drafted to emphasize the constructive and positive side of the State Department's policy in Asia. In part at least they were intended as an answer to those critics who have said that the department's emphasis was wholly negative—on containing the further spread of communism.

That somewhat old-fashioned phrase "a scholar and a gentleman" seems to me to apply with singular aptness to Acheson. He has the strength of a brilliant mind, seasoned character and adherence to a code of conduct that is sometimes at variance with the crude give and take of practical politics. This may see him through the present crisis even though there is a loud silence where he might expect at least the minimum of support.

Spy Gubitchev to Go Home; Decides Not to Appeal Case

New York, March 15 (AP).—Convicted spy Valentin A. Gubitchev withdrew today from further tilts with American courts and said he'd go home to Russia next Monday.

The 33-year-old Russian remained in jail. The decision not to appeal a 15-year prison sentence was announced by his attorney, Abraham L. Pomerantz.

Sentence is to be suspended on condition Gubitchev go back to Russia, "never to return."

U. S. Attorney Irving H. Saypol had insisted that Gubitchev waive all right to appeal from his conviction of plotting to spy for the Soviets with his ex-pal, former Government girl Judith Coplon.

The dark-eyed Miss Coplon was released today after bond of $40,000 was posted for her. She is appealing her conviction. Her brother, Bertram, put up the money in cash. When newsmen asked him where he got it, he replied "no comment."

The Government recommended deporting Gubitchev instead of jailing him after the State Department warned the Attorney General's office there might be reprisals against Americans in Iron Curtain countries.

Yesterday Pomerantz declared the deal was off if Gubitchev had to give up his chance of appeal.

But today he appeared before Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan and read a statement announcing that Gubitchev would not appeal.

Pomerantz was accompanied to Federal Court by the Third Secretary of the Russian Embassy, Yuri Novikov.

He sidestepped reporters' questions as to whether he had seen Gubitchev in jail or exactly how the change of plans had come about.

Miss Coplon, 28, was sentenced last Thursday to 15 years in prison on spy conspiracy charges. The term is in addition to a sentence of 40 months to 10 years for conviction in Washington, D. C., on similar charges.

Judge Ryan ordered Gubitchev's appearance in court next Monday morning, when he will suspend the sentence.

State Dept. to Open Its Files To Aid Senate Loyalty Probe

fore Tydings' subcommittee. He added that there is "no substance" to the charges.

2. John S. Service, United States diplomat denounced by McCarthy as pro-Communist, has been summoned home from India to appear before a State Department loyalty board.

In testimony Tuesday morning, McCarthy said that although Service had been given clearance by the department loyalty body several times, the Government loyalty board of appeals and review had recently made a post-audit of the clearances.

Then the board sent the case back to the State Department, McCarthy said, with a rejection of the findings, a demand that Service appear personally before the department loyalty board, and that a new panel, differing in membership from the one that previously heard the Service case, be convened for a rehearing.

Most of Charges Denied

Lincoln White, State Department press officer, flatly denied most of this yesterday.

He said the review board returned the case to the department Tuesday afternoon, several hours after McCarthy's testimony.

He added that the board did not suggest that Service should be denied a clearance, but simply that he appear personally—as he apparently had not done before—for questioning by the department's loyalty board.

Finally, he said the review body had not suggested that any new or different panel be appointed to hear the Service case.

White said the board's recommendation does not mean that Service is "under any suspicion," and he told reporters:

"We assume the board thinks that Mr. Service should have an opportunity to speak for himself."

White said Service is now en route by ship to Calcutta, India, to take up a new assignment as secretary in the American Embassy at New Delhi. He will return to this country immediately by plane.

A question still unanswered is how McCarthy knew in advance of the review board's action in sending the case back to the State Department.

Wisdom of Documenting

In his letter to Tydings, McCarthy said the recall of Service "amply demonstrated" the wisdom of his past procedure in slowly but fully documenting all his cases. He said he had hoped to document all of the 81 cases equally well, but finally decided to comply with Tydings' demand. He will furnish the names to the subcommittee in secret, he said.

When Tydings told reporters earlier in the day that he was promised access to the files, he said that he had called John E. Peurifoy, Assistant Secretary of State, and found him perfectly willing to make the files available.

The method by which this will be done, however, is not yet decided, Tydings said. He added that there is no question of him attempting to use powers of subpena voted to his subcommittee by the Senate. The word 'subpena" was not even mentioned in his conversation with Peurifoy, Tydings stated.

Search May Be Enough

It may be that Tydings will be content to send his investigators to the State Department to look at the files, rather than take physical possession of them in the Capitol.

Tydings seemed himself a little dubious about the wisdom of a congressional committee searching executive branch files.

He pointed out that Presidents since Washington of several parties, had resisted attempts by Congress to obtain executive papers, and their power to do so had never been successfully gainsayed.

"So if President Truman lets the committee have the files," Tydings went on, "he will be creating a precedent. No doubt it will be seized upon to plague him by those who will ask for files they know pretty well in advance he is not going to let them have, so as to make a political football out of the situation.

"But in spite of that, the State Department indicates rather precisely that in the instant matter it will make the files available."

House Approves Stiff Penalties For Revealing Secret Data and aliens alike, opportunities to acquire information vital to our national security . . . without fear of prosecution in our courts . . .

"This bill does not restrict the rights or liberties of any citizen to whom the interests of the United States are paramount . . .

"We believe that the mere existence of improved security legislation may be sufficient to discourage and prevent a certain amount of espionage. The power of the law can be invoked to control the rest."

The bill tightens the United States code and provides stiffened penalties for officials or unauthorized persons using restricted data in a manner they have reason to believe could be detrimental to the United States or advantageous to a foreign power.

In addition to extending the statute of limitations from 3 to 10 years in such cases, the House adopted an amendment by Representative Andrew Jacobs (D., Ind.) permitting even later prosecutions in the case of Government officials and employes.

Under the Jacobs amendment, the 10 years would not start to run until a Government employe who violated the code left the post in which the security offense was committed.

Another amendment by Representative W. Sterling Cole (D., N. Y.) specifically included "nuclear energy" items and research in the new security code.

Other provisions of the bill:

1. Make it a crime for those having lawful possession of National defense secrets to wilfully communicate them or cause or attempt to transmit them to an authorized person on demand.

2. Penalize for the first time persons having unauthorized possession of restricted data, who fail to surrender it to authorized officials, whether they are requested to do so or not.

3. Extend penalties to employes who know security material entrusted to them has been illegally removed, lost, stolen or destroyed and fail to report it promptly to a superior officer.

4. Double the penalty for conspiracy to commit the forbidden acts to make the conspiracy as grave as the crime itself. The penalty in each case would be $10,000 or 10 years.

5. Require registration under the Foreign Agents Registration Act of anyone who has knowledge of, or has received instruction in, the espionage, counterespionage or sabotage tactics of a foreign country. Persons trained for our own intelligence services, or those whose knowledge is purely academic, are excepted.

6. Failure to register as a foreign agent would be considered a continuing offense, in order to extend the statute of limitations.

7. The Secretary of Defense, with the approval of the President, would be empowered to promulgate regulations for protection of military installations. Violation of the regulations was made punishable by fine or imprisonment. During war or emergency the President could extend the regulations to any area or property he wishes.

Floods Plague Ecuador

Quito, Ecuador, March 15 (AP).—Heavy rains washed out four bridges today on the Guayaquil to Quito rail line. Flood waters forced inhabitants of six towns to flee to the hills.

Human Rights Council to Honor Judge Waring

Federal Judge J. Waties Waring and Mrs. Waring of South Carolina will be presented citations for distinguished service here Friday by the American Council on Human Rights.

The council is sponsored by Negro school fraternities.

Judge Waring, whose orders of 1947 and 1948 opened the South Carolina Democratic primaries and party to Negroes, also will be guest speaker for the council's annual meeting Friday, said a council spokesman, Miss Patricia Roberts.

Mrs. Waring in speeches in South Carolina, Washington and New York has called the South "decadent" and "morally weak" and has stated Negroes should intermarry whites if they please.

The president of the American Council on Human Rights, the council office here said, is Mrs. Edna Over Gray, Baltimore 23, Maryland.

Exchange to Curtail Marathon Phone Calls

Toledo, Ohio, March 15 (AP).—Long-winded telephone conversations on suburban party lines are doomed in one Toledo exchange area.

About May 1, when the Curtice, Ohio, exchange will be connected with the Toledo system, an automatic cut-off will deaden the line when 6 minutes are up, E. M. Woodward, commercial superintendent of the Northern Ohio Telephone Co., announced today.

Nash Pension Plan Hailed by Unions As Most Advanced

Detroit, March 15. (AP).—A pension program for 25,000 employes of Nash-Kelvinator Corp. was described tonight by union spokesmen as "the most advanced yet negotiated in heavy industry."

Nash will contribute a fixed sum of 10 cents into a pension and insurance "kitty." Seven cents will go for pensions. The company's insurance contribution will total 2.6 cents with .4 cents going for administration costs.

The five unions concerned have agreed to contribute 1.7 cents toward the insurance program cost.

200,000 Still Lack Auto Tags In Maryland

Baltimore, March 15 (AP).—Some 200,000 Marylanders — possibly more—still have their 1950-51 license plates to buy.

A good many will mail in their applications or purchase their plates at nearby county seats, but a large percentage will descend on the department of motor vehicles headquarters in Baltimore.

Commissioner Arthur H. Brice and his staff are ready for the rush. Brice said today that, as of the close of business March 14, the department had issued 146,877 new licenses. The figure does not include those issued in the various counties.

The deadline for new licenses is March 31.

Apartment House Asks 10% Boost And It's Approved

A 10 percent rent increase, exactly what was sought, was recommended yesterday for 56 apartment units owned by Herbert Harvey, Inc., at 127 C st. ne.

The recommended order issued after a hearing by District Rent Control Examiner William F. Nansfield becomes final March 24 unless protest is made to the rent control administrator.

Rents on adjustment would range from $43.45 a month to $65.45 a month. They now range from $39.50 to $59.50. The increase had been sought to compensate for increased operating costs and taxes.

One on the Aisle—

Plaza to Accent Intimate Aspect

By Richard L. Coe

PARADOX: The live theater theaters are getting bigger, the movie theaters smaller.

Maybe it's not a trend, but the high cost of touring plays makes large seating capacity important, just as the growing selectivity of movie audiences is creating a vogue for smaller spots where certain pictures are likely to create specialized audiences and, incidentally, long runs.

Downtown will see another of these in mid-April. This is Sam Roth's new Plaza, at 1336 New York ave., as likely a spot as the town boasts. There will be only 300 seats, but the policy will be first runs and, at this strategic nook right off 14th st. on the downtown side of the avenue, its success seems assured.

Roth, whose Virginia chain and District theaters have made him a local name for 25 years, is determined that the Plaza will be a bull's-eye. He's accenting the intimate aspect of the house and plans on making the downstairs lounge, which runs almost the length of the theater, "as much like a living room as possible, easy chairs, television and, if the law will permit, smoking facilities."

High on Roth's priority list is the new cycloramic screen, like the one he has in the Stanton. This new device makes it possible for people close up and on the sides to get full-rounded figures, not the thin shadows that side seats used to give. Not that there'll be many side seats. The Plaza's a narrow house, with six seats on each side of a center aisle.

"Popcorn?" I asked.

"No. No popcorn," said Sam.

With the Playhouse, Dupont, Trans-Lux and Little all working on much the same idea of first run foreign or "limited appeal" domestic films in small houses, there naturally will be considerable rivalry for pictures. But Roth doesn't expect much trouble here. He points out that long runs in all those theaters have created a big backlog of pictures and that distributors won't want to tieup their products indefinitely.

At the moment he's toying with three new ones: "Salt to the Devil," the version of "Christ in Concrete" that Sam Wanamaker, the Gayety's next star, made last summer in England; "Il Trovatore," a highly-praised Italian film of the opera, and "Gay Lady," a British Technicolored musical.

Whatever the picture is, you can count on it that mid-April will give you a natty new downtown spot.

SAM JACK KAUFMAN week gets under steam this morning at the Capitol, where energetic, ever-enthusiastic Sam Jack will be celebrating his tenth anniversary as conductor of the pit band and coiner of many a surprising introduction . . . Back to the Capitol, where for seven years she was a favorite vocalist, comes Lynn Allison, who'll join our current darling, Kay DeWitt, in chansons under the Kaufman baton (hey Sam, that chanson-baton stuff's pretty good, huh?) . . . With Lynn, though you won't see him, will be her young son, but papa, Joseph S. McCoy, jr., will be holding down the Memphis fort.

DIDJA see that bearded British naval officer (retired) around town? . . . He's Lieut. Comdr. K. D. Iain Murray, one of the world's top guys on pirate lore . . . He's been technically advising Universal on "Buccaneer's Girl" and you may have glimpsed him as himself in Noel Coward's "In Which We Serve" . . . The studio thinks Murray's wonderful 'cause he claims all the world's great pirates were young, handsome and lusty . . . Yvonne De Carlo is the gal Pirate Philip Friend gets in this one.

BALLET THEATER, which will be along the 29th and 30th, has a new, promising assignment . . . It will next season supply dances and dancers for the Metropolitan Opera, whose incoming director, Rudolf Bing, announces the news with some pride . . . The Metropolitan usually has had its own ballet, though the American Ballet Company supplied the choreography during the '35 season . . . Looks like a fine thing for both the Met and the Lucia Chase-Oliver Smith group.

TODAY begins the parade of Academy Award nomination pictures at the Metropolitan; there's to be a new one every day for a week . . . "A Letter to Three Wives," with Jeanne Crain, Linda Darnell, Ann Sothern and Paul Douglas, begins the series . . . Also Oscar-minded is the Pix, which has an Oscar story entry in "Paisan."

SPRING? . . . Sidney Lust's drive-in theater at Beltsville will be open for the cars beginning Saturday night at 6. . . . First attraction of the local drive-in season will be another Oscar entrant, "Twelve O'Clock High," which, General Vandenberg vows, "no matter what anyone else says, is the best picture of the year." . . . General McAuliffe differs: "Best picture of the year," says the airborne Irisher, "is 'Battleground'." . . . Both beamish brass smile when they say it.

CROWDED THREESOME: Joan Caulfield's interested in William Holden's distrust and Billy De Wolfe is interested in Joan in the Warner's comedy, "Dear Wife," the "Dear Ruth" successor opening this morning

Porches Put 13 Families Afoul of Law

Thirteen families tenanting a GI housing development at Chillum Castle Manor in the vicinity of the 6400 block of North Capitol st. and the unit block of Tuckerman st., have found that recently added porches have put their homes in conflict with District zoning and building laws.

This was disclosed yesterday at a hearing before Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King 'n Municipal Court. Residents of four homes appeared, and were told to remove the roofs from the porches by April 18.

The official contention is that under zoning regulations in the area two side yards 2 inches wide for each foot of building depth must be allowed at every home. The roofed porches, the Government says, encroach on this space.

The Government also holds the porches violate plumbing regulations because the roofs overhang toilet windows, and violate the building code since the permit for construction covered only alterations, and not permanent adjuncts.

The porches were constructed by Albert Russ, 8625 Piney Branch rd., Silver Spring, Md.

Residents who attended the hearing yesterday were George M. King, 6419 N. Capitol st.; John T. Pappas, 6421 N. Capitol st.; Morris Arkin, 23 Tuckerman st. nw., and Alvin Oremland, 35 Tuckerman st. nw.

Church Federation Completes 30 Years' Cooperative Work

Thirty years of cooperative Protestant work in Greater Washington were completed yesterday by the Washington Federation of Churches.

The federation was organized on March 15, 1920, at a meeting in Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 900 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Since its organization it has grown from a membership of 60 churches to 209 churches and allied organizations representing more than 120,000 persons. Its staff has increased from 2 to 16.

At noon Friday the thirtieth anniversary of the federation will be marked at the monthly meeting of the board of directors.

Since 1927, offices of the federation have been in a five-story building at 1751 N st. nw.

Tour of McKinley High School Planned

A tour for parents and prospective parents of McKinley High School students will be conducted through the school Friday at 2 p. m. under sponsorship of the Parent-Teacher Association.

The tour will include a visit to shops, the library, greenhouse, auditorium and clubhouse and will end in the teachers' cafeteria where tea will be served.

Court Asked to Ban Local Movie Censors

The Supreme Court was asked yesterday to ban city and State censorship of the movies as an even stiffer proposal to subject film actors and producers to Federal licensing came under fire in the Senate.

The court case involves the picture, "Curly," which was banned in Memphis, Tenn., because it depicts white and Negro children playing together and occupying the same schoolroom. The Memphis Board of Censors said the South does not "recognize social equality between the races, even in children."

The board's action was upheld by the Tennessee Supreme Court and Hal Roach Studios, producers of the film and United Artists Corp., its distributor, appealed to the high court.

Meantime, Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.) voiced strong opposition to a proposal by Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) for Federal censorship of the movies and the people who make them.

Johnson offered it Tuesday after making a blistering attack on the real-life loves of Ingrid Bergman and Rita Hayworth.

The movie industry's appeal from the Memphis ban was supported by Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America. He issued a statement saying he hoped the high court would hand down a clear-cut decision.

Homeland May Not Accept Ingrid's Divorce

Stockholm, Sweden, March 15 (AP).—A Swedish Foreign Office spokesman said today it is "doubtful" whether the Stockholm Circuit Court ever will recognize Ingrid Bergman's Mexican divorce from Dr. Peter Lindstrom.

"If the Svea Hovraett (Circuit Court) does not recognize the Mexican divorce decree of Miss Bergmann," the spokesman added, "she cannot marry (Director Roberto) Rossellini in either Italy or Sweden, because both countries are parties to the same marriage convention of 1902.

"In order to get married, they will have to go to a country which is not a party to that convention, such as the United States or Mexico."

Master Zone Plan Restudied For Bethesda

The Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission is restudying its proposed master zoning plan for Bethesda in the light of testimony given at a public hearing Tuesday night.

At the hearing, held in the Bethesda Elementary School, members of civic organizations urged lessening of the area recommended for apartment use, while land owners sought an increase. Business interests generally approved the plan as presented.

At present, there are 69 acres of developed apartments in the area, with an additional 272 acres zoned for apartment use but not developed. The plan proposes 284 more acres for this use.

Blair Lee, 3d, commission vice chairman who presided at the hearing, said yesterday he was "gratified" to learn that the commission's proposals "lie about halfway between the positions of those persons who want fewer apartments and those who want more."

He estimated that the commission may adopt the final form of the plan in about three weeks. The record is being kept open for 10 days, he said, to allow filing of written statements by interested parties.

2 Held for Jury On Robbery Plot Charges

Two men yesterday were held for the grand jury on charges of conspiring to rob a restaurant at 1524 K st. nw., March 6.

They are Albert Senior jr., 28, of 612 8th st. sw., and Bela A. Stramer, 36, of 1469 U st. se. United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence held Senior in $7500 bond and Stramer on $5000 bond.

A third defendant, James A. Lowry, 25, of 668 B st. se., waived a hearing Tuesday and was held in $5000 bond for the grand jury.

The police work of Lieut. George Cooper of the robbery squad was highly praised by Lawrence.

Cooper had testified that, tipped off that a robbery was being planned, he and his men waited until Senior walked into the restaurant, then they closed in on him. Cooper said, a revolver was found on the man. The others were arrested later.

1000 Expected At B'nai B'rith Meeting Here

The triennial convention of B'nai B'rith, oldest and largest Jewish organization in the world, will be held at the Hotel Statler Saturday to Wednesday with more than 1000 expected to attend.

Yesterday four units of the organization held meetings at the Statler in preparation for the convention. They were the Hillel Foundations, Youth Organization, Vocational Service Bureau and Americanism Commission.

At the Hillel meeting, Frank Goldman, president of B'nai B'rith, declared he had no "fear for the future of democracy, if it is in the hands of our American college youth. Their hearts and minds are sound. They will surely do as good a job as we—if not far better."

The high light of the triennial convention will be a banquet Tuesday evening to be addressed by Trygve Lie, secretary general of the United Nations; Vice President Alben W. Barkley and Goldman.

Arlington School Board Budget Hearing Tonight

The Arlington County School Board will hold a public hearing at 8 p. m. today on its proposed 1950-1951 fiscal year budget of $3,705,190, largest in its history. The session will be held in the Thomas Jefferson School, 816 Fillmore st., Arlington.

Members of the Arlington County Board will sit in on the hearing as observers. The $3,705,190 proposed budget compares to the adopted budget of $2,950,000 for the current fiscal year.

Bids on the new Hume School, to be built at 24th and South Nash sts., Arlington, will be awarded at the start of the public hearing, school officials said yesterday.

$1200 Stolen In Arlington, $987 From Firm Here

More than $1200 in cash and 100 cartons of cigarettes were stolen from the Lee-Lexington Pharmacy, 5719 Lee hwy., Arlington, police learned yesterday. The thieves had broken open a safe to get the cash.

In Washington, a metal box containing $987 was taken from a filing cabinet in the office of the Capital Trash Co., 1245 I st. se. A side door to the office had been forced.

Thieves broke through the skylight of a liquor store at 3147 Mount Pleasant st. nw. and stole between $200 and $300 from an unlocked safe and an undetermined amount of liquor.

Father Asks Law To Retrieve Baby; Wants Wife, Too

Edward G. Hopwood, 25, sued yesterday in District Court for return of his 2-year-old daughter, Susan, to his custody. He said he had cared for the child almost since her birth.

Hopwood, who lives with his mother at 5186 Fulton st. nw., said that his wife, Mary, 21, who left him last January 4, took the child from his home last Friday, and has her at some place unknown to him.

He declared he wants his wife, a Veterans' Administration clerk, to come back to him, "because Susan needs us both."

Fifth District Banks Report Record Gross

By S. Oliver Goodman

Net profits increased, but remained below the all-time high of 1946, according to a special review by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

"Gross current operating earnings of 141 million dollars," said the review, "represented an increase of seven million, largely accounted for by larger earnings on loans which were 5½ million above 1948."

Operating expenses and income taxes, it was noted, also advanced to new peaks.

Net current earnings amounted to $53,667,000, against $50,992,000 in 1948. After charge-offs for securities dealings, provision for reserves and income taxes, the net income last year totaled $32,974,000 against $28,195,000 in 1948.

Net profits of the regional banks were 8.2 percent of total capital accounts, as compared with 7.4 percent in 1948. This exceeded the rate of return earned by all Reserve member banks in the United States, which was 7.6 percent in 1949 and 7.2 percent in 1948.

Two-thirds of the four-million-dollar increase in last year's operating expenses, it was reported, was due to higher wages and salaries.

There were 479 member banks at the end of 1949, one more than in the previous year.

HIKES SURPLUS: Hamilton National Bank has transferred $250,000 from undivided profits to surplus, President Wilmer J. Waller reported yesterday. That makes surplus $2,500,000, undivided profits $924,500 and total capital funds $5,419,600.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: James G. Erwin jr. has been appointed Washington district sales manager of Capital Airlines . . . Falls Church Street Problem Cleared Up

Recent action by the Virginia legislature will help solve the problem of a dedicated, but unbuilt street cutting across the site of a proposed new Falls Church primary school, the city school board learned last night.

Because of steep grades on some portions of the 7.5 acre site in Fairfax County, at Great Falls and Woodland streets, the ideal location of the school would overlap part of the proposed street.

City Attorney LaRue Van Meter told the board in executive session last night that a recent change in the law will allow vacation of the street merely by agreement of abutting land owners, plus approval of the Fairfax Board of Supervisors. Previously, several hundred property owners in the subdivision involved, would have had a say in the matter—a process which would have cost the school board $3000 and a year's time.

The board also voted last night to put its new teacher salary scale in effect over a two-year period under a formula worked out by its superintendent.

RHEUMATISM AND NEURITIS PAINS

A fast acting internal medicine called ROMIND, recently developed by the Knox Control Laboratory, is now bringing new hope, happiness and comfort to thousands of sufferers from the pains of Arthritis, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Sciatica, Neuralgia and Lumbago. ROMIND dissolves in the small intestine; then the ingredients are absorbed into the blood and thus can reach every part of the body. That's why it works so fast in helping 3 ways: 1. First dose starts curbing pain. 2. Helps Nature remove excess Uric Acid which often aggravates pains, soreness and stiff muscles. 3. Helps you work and sleep in greater comfort. Get ROMIND from your druggist today. Quick satisfaction or money back guaranteed.

Arlington County reached a thumping 47 percent of quota yesterday to pace all units in the Red Cross drive.

By contrast with the sluggish District campaign, the county drive is showing the "best spirit in any peacetime year," Miss M. Louise Thornton, executive director, said.

The 47 percent, reported at a luncheon in the Red Cross chapter house, represented $12,181 of Arlington5s $25,700 goal.

It was a particularly brilliant gain over last year's county figure of 18 percent at this time.

Meantime, Drive Chairman Daniel W. Bell said he was aiming for an over-all report of 50 percent of quota at Friday's general report luncheon.

The 35.79 percent subscribed this year compares unfavorably with 52.12 this time last year. Goal for 1950 is $1,039,000.

Mrs. Truman will be a guest at Friday's luncheon in the Chamber of Commerce Hall of Flags, 12:30 p. m. Speaker will be Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark, Treasurer of the United States.

D. C. to Draft College Plan

Plans for a public-supported college program for the District will be presented shortly to the Board of Education, Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning said last night.

School officials are "working diligently" on such a proposal, he told a group representing parent-teacher associations and civic organizations.

He said he has prepared a report showing "the great array of college opportunity" offered at public expense to residents of the States.

But in the District, he pointed out, higher education is available only in "two very small inadequately equipped teacher colleges."

"Improvement is decidedly in order," Dr. Corning said.

There are several possibilities under consideration for setting up a college program, he said.

One would follow recommendations of the Strayer Survey on local schools for a technical institute combined with a junior college. A second would provide for the expansion of Wilson and Miner teachers colleges to municipal colleges offering work for both bachelor's and master's degrees.

New college plants "definitely would be needed," Dr. Corning said.

The school head spoke at a meeting called by the Board of Education to explain the progress of school budget requests for the fiscal year beginning next July.

Herbert P. Leeman, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, questioned Dr. Corning closely on why the school board had failed to request funds from Congress to start a junior college.

The school superintendent said he had delayed because of the "more pressing problems" of part-time instruction and overcrowding.

Dr. Corning told representatives of Congress Heights and Washington Highlands that elementary schools in those two areas will continue on part time next fall. The new Simon School, once scheduled for completion in September, will not be ready until December or January, he said.

SALES and net income were the second largest in our history, exceeded only by the record year 1948.

OUR 1949 BUSINESS, in large part, moved against a declining trend in the forepart of the year in the clock and watch industry. Some of our best known products are still on allocation.

MARKETS for General Time products—whether clocks for the home or timing devices for industry—are constantly expanding . . . keeping pace with the growth in population, new housing and factory developments.

WIDE PRICE RANGE—from $2.25 to $295—is covered by General Time's equally wide range of clocks and watches.

Five Ranking Fire Officials Transferred

Transfer of five ranking Fire Department officials was announced yesterday by Chief Engineer Joseph A. Mayhew.

Those transferred as of yesterday were:

Capt. Joseph W. Conroy from No. 12 Engine Company to command of the Sixth Battalion.

Battalion Chief Fred Litteral from the First to Fifth Battalion.

Mayhew said Grunwell requested that he be transferred back to the fire fighting unit

The other transfers resulted from this move and from the necessity of filling a vacancy in the Fifth Battalion command, Mayhew said. Fifth Battalion Chief G. A. Cole is ill and not expected to return to duty, Mayhew stated.

Mayhew said he will recommend Conroy for promotion to rank of battalion chief when a permanent vacancy occurs. The chief also said that if the reorganization plan is approved by Congress he will recommend promotion of Litteral to the third deputy chief's position that would be created.

Five Charged With Narcotics Sales in Camp

Five men yesterday were charged with peddling narcotics at Andrews Air Force Base.

Two were held for the Federal grand jury in Baltimore while the others were held in bond for a continued hearing April 27 when the latter were arraigned before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

A sixth suspect was picked up by Federal agents and members of the Metropolitan police narcotics squad late yesterday afternoon and held for investigation.

Two of the men were arrested Tuesday night at Andrews Base and three more were taken into custody in the District the same night.

Those arrested at Andrews are: Judson Broadus, 27, of 606 59th av., Fairmount Heights, Md., and Clinton Johnson, 27, of 531 Florida av. nw. United States Commissioner Sam W. H. Meloy at Upper Marlboro held Broadus in $4000 bond for the Federal Grand Jury in Baltimore and Johnson in $2000 bond for the grand jury.

Arrested in the District and granted a continued hearing were: Anderson Griffin, 24, of 457 Massachusetts ave. nw.; William T. Harris, 28, of 607 Freedmen's Court nw., and James Townsend, 24, of 457 Massachusetts ave. nw. All the suspects are civilians. Marijuana and heroin are involved in the case.

The arrests were made following more than two months of investigation by United States narcotics agents, Metropolitan police narcotics squad men, and Andrews Base personnel.

The investigation was touched off when a soldier who was approached as a possible buyer reported the incident to his commanding officer, an Andrews Base spokesman said.

The soldier was instructed to go along with the would-be seller. Meanwhile, Federal agents were called in.

Two of the narcotics men worked undercover at the base making buys, according to Thomas W. Andrew, in charge of the Washington field office, Bureau of Narcotics, Treasury Department.

Scouts Will Be Prepared— To Show Some Skills Friday

The Washington Post

SCOUTS AT BAT—These two Boy Scouts will be ready for the opening of the big scouting exhibition, opening Friday in the National Guard Armory. They are Thomas Long (left) of 2130 30th st. ne., and Warner Hord of 2615 Randolph st. ne., both of Troop 87, making a baseball bat on a wood lathe

Seen any snakes milked lately? You'll have a chance to Friday and Saturday at the Armory.

Snake-milking will be one of the skills demonstrated by the Boy Scouts at the all-Scout exposition.

What you milk from a snake is poison, naturally. The venomonous snakes will be milked by Explorer Scout Troop No. 298 of Berwyn, Md.

In addition the Scouts will demonstrate many other skills.

These include camping, cooking woodlore, conservation, pioneering, pathfinding. Also "vocational subjects" from a to z—archery, that is, to zoology.

Some 5000 Cub and Boy Scouts of the Washington area are expected to take part in the mammoth show.

A Cub Pack will give a minstrel show. Therell be novelty circus acts—all this by the Boy Scouts, nothing professional.

One group of Girl Scouts will be allowed to take part to help with the folklore dancing.

The show opens at 8 p. m. Friday, with a 10-minute ceremony, Commissioner John Russell Young doing the honors. The show goes to 10 p. m., is open again from 2 p. m. to 10 p. m. Saturday. Admission charge is 50 cents.

Dogcatcher Accused Of Unfair Tactics

Yorkton, Sask., March 15 (U.P.). The town's dogcatcher was accused today of using sex to trap stray dogs.

Deputy-Mayor W. Johnston said the catcher was accompanied on his rounds by a female dog on a leash, to lure wanadering canine males.

"That's a dirty trick," said Johnston.

Compton Suit For Support Is Dismissed

The maintenance suit Mrs. Selma Compton, 41-year-old mother of 13 children, brought against her husband, Howard H. Compton, 43, a Washington jeweler, was dismissed by consent yesterday in District Court.

Judge Richmond B. Keech dismissed the suit after he was told that the Comptons have now become reconciled. They reside at 3718 40th ave., Cottage City, Md.

Compton's attorney, Emmett Leo Sheehan told the court that the husband, because of "adverse publicity" resulting from "the case, has given up his jewelry business and now seeks a farm where he will reside with his family.

The wife had charged that her husband left her and her family in December without funds although he had a flourishing business here.

Subsequently, Compton was jailed in Marlboro for beating up his wife after she filed the suit. He was "evicted" from the jail after his $50 fine was paid by an anonymous person.

Compton was ordered by Judge Keech to pay Mrs. Compton's lawyer, Louis Lebowitz, the sum of $400 for legal services performed in connection with the maintenance action.

Red Ink on Letters To Dramatize Deficit

Two New York House Republicans dipped into the red (ink) yesterday to dramatize their opposition to deficit spending by the Government.

Representatives Cole and Kilburn said they will sign all their letters in red——until the Government starts living within its income.

A stamped explanation accompanies each signature. It reads:

"This letter is signed in red to remind you and me that our Government spends more than it gets. It must end, else we face national ruin."

Daughter Charges Temple U. Virtually Imprisoned Father

the will, but his was because she was given $250,000 earlier, the suit said. However, the suit continued, Dr. Chase later took back more than half of this.

King, a Washington attorney, said if the suit is successful action may be taken later to recover some of the gift money. However, no attempt will be made to void a million-dollar gift to establish a cancer research foundation in memory of Dr. Chase's wife, Agnes Barr Chase, a Temple graduate.

In the suit, Mrs. King charged, according to the Associated Press:

"That Temple University and the Temple University Medical School . . . embarked upon a concerted effort to d minate, influence, prejudice and control him (Dr. Chase) . . . to the end that he would give or bequeath all of his estate to the hospital and medical school."

That the university and its medical school acted "particularly through one William Parkinson, director of the hospital and dean of the school."

That her father was kept in a special room adjoining Parkinson's office at the university hospital, where Dr. Chase "could be given consistently exaggerated personal attentions, was awarded various honorary degrees, was subjected to elaborate manifestations of veneration on the part of the staff members for himself and for the memory of his wife."

That a university employe accompanied the doctor at all times and would not leave his presence even when he was visited by his doctor.

That her father was subjected to major surgery without her notice or permission.

That at the time Dr. Chase wrote his will, in 1948, and for several years prior, he "suffered from insane dtelusions . . . including . . . that his daughter had intended and caused the death of her mother . . . and that Agnes Barr Chase had not died from cancer which was in fact the cause of her death."

The Associated Press also quoted Dr. Robert L. Johnson, Temple president, as saying in Utica, N. Y., that there was "not a word of truth" to the charges. A university spokesman in Philadelphia was quoted to the effect that the university would "deny categorically" all the charges.

Two years ago the Kings, through a Washington Post advertisement, sought to enlist citizen support for a "world government" that would lead to ultimate peace. About 50 persons responded to the appeal.

Federal Court Ruling Backs Ga. Unit Voting

Atlanta, March 15 (AP).—Georgia's county unit election system, unique protector of rural political power, was upheld as legal today in a 2-to-1 special Federal Court decision.

Attorneys quickly announced an appeal to the United States Supreme Court. They said they would press for a final decision before the State Democratic primary, set for June 28.

Judges Samuel Sibley and T. Hoyt Davis agreed that the unit system discriminates against big city voters in Georgia but declared that Federal Courts cannot intervene.

Would Hit Talmadge Hard

Judge Neil Andrews, in a strong dissent, declared: "it is difficult to imagine a more obvious denial of the equal protection of the laws than that imposed by the county unit system or one with less foundation in experience, practicality or necessity."

Overthrow of the unit system would revolutionize Georgia politics and government. It would be a severe blow upon the entrenched forces of Gov. Herman Talmadge.

State law assigns from two to six election units to counties, in theory like the national electoral college. But in practice, it gives rural counties up to 122 times more power per vote than city counties.

The Talmadge dynasty—and almost all successful politicains in Georgia—have pitched their appeal for generations to the State's host of small counties. Talmadge and his father, the late Gov. Eugene Talmadge, usually failed to win support in thickly populated counties.

Constitutional Question

"Our question is primarily whether the Federal Constitution is violated thereby. In general, that Constitution is not committed to election by the people over the whole effective territory in which every vote shall have equal weight," the majority opinion said.

The opinion noted that the President of the United States "is not elected by the equal votes of the people but by electors in each State 'appointed in such maner as the Legislatures thereof may direct'."

The opinion observed that the Nation has "two Senators from each State, though in population Rhode Island and Nevada differ from New York, Pennsylvania and California, as much as Fulton County does from Georgia's smaller counties."

17 Injured As Plane Hits Coffee Shop

Las Vegas, Nev., March 15 (AP).—A fighter plane ploughed into a cafe at Las Vegas Air Force Base today, injuring 17 persons, three critically.

With two exceptions, the injured were base personnel or post exchange employes, gathered in the snack far for mid-morning coffee.

Most seriously hurt, with a fractured skull, is Mrs. Ruth Kring, 49, a waitress. Others badly hurt are a waiter, Monte Sayer, 49, and Sergt. Walter B. Ingraham, all of Las Vegas. Doctors gave each an even chance of recovery.

An Air Force spokesman gave this account:

The plane, returning from a routine flight, developed engine trouble on an approach. The pilot decided to make another turn of the field but the engine quit entirely, and the craft hit the concrete block restaurant on the fly.

The fuselage, with the pilot still strapped in his seat, splintered on the wall, but the engine swept the counter of patrons and finally stopped against the opposite wall, 30 feet away.

The craft tore a hole 8 by 16 feet in the foot-thick concrete blocks, and started a small fire, which was quickly extinguished by base fire crews.

Pilot of the F-51 Mustang was identified as Second Lieut. Edwin Gutt.

26 Selected For Who's Who At Maryland U.

Twenty six University of Maryland students have been chosen to appear in Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges.

They were named by a faculty committee in consultation with students, according to university officials. The basis of selection was not disclosed.

Virginie Bennett, James Barnhart, James Belt, Ann M. Boswell, Harold B. Buckley, Doris M. Crewe, Fred E. Davis, Billee Hatcher, Elizabeth L. Jobe, Catherine A. Kelly, Robert J. Lange and Robert Mann.

Also named were Frank Masterson, Donald S. Mortimer, Nicholas Nicholas, Glenn Ovrevik, Lynne Rossmann, Bettye Smithe, James Steffler, Joseph Tydings, Lathrop Utley, Morton Weston, Helen E. White and Elmer Wingate.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., March 15.—Out in Burbank, Calif., the town that was named for the late great horticulturist, another grafting job is being undertaken. The St. Louis Browns, of the vegetable kingdom, are getting the full treatment from a Dr. David S. Tracy, unfamed as yet, but undaunted.

POVICH

The good doctor, a psychologist and hypnotist, is attempting to infuse the Browns with the will and the means to win more ball games. What sprouts is uncertain as yet, but Dr. Tracy has achieved his first goal, he says. He has 'em relaxed. The relaxed ball player is under no tension, he says. So far, so good.

He's been doing it by mass hypnosis, and they're almost ready to believe the doctor knows his stuff. He holds two daily hotelroom sessions with the players. They aren't compelled to attend, but most of 'em who did, out of curiosity, now are regulars. It's as good as a floor show.

The other day, for instance, the good doctor fastened his hypnotic eyes on Outfielder Ken Wood and by negative suggestion convinced the player his feet were glued to the floor. Wood, no stooge, tried and failed to take a step.

BOB BROEG relates all these things from the Browns' training camp. He writes that Dr. Tracy, with a minimum of hypnotic palaver, brought Rookie Second Baseman Owen Friend to the platform and told him he wouldn't be able to raise his cigarette lighter to his face because the gadget suddenly weighed 50 pounds.

"Darned if I could do it either," said Friend afterward.

Thus far, all that Tracy has proved is that he is a master hypnotist who could make his living on the stage. The fruits of his experiments with the Browns will come later when his auto-suggestion will rid them of the defeatist complex that has gnawed at the St. Louis team for so many years.

He says he will make them concentrate on the work at hand—that is, play baseball without off-the-field worries. "I was pleased," he says, "to see how well they could concentrate—the way a pitcher on the mound or a batter at the plate could perform without letting outside interference disturb him. That means effective coordination of his skills."

MANAGER ZACH TAYLOR has been a party to Tracy's ministrations to the Browns' mental poise, and now he has asked the good doctor the $64 question: Can he take a pitcher aside before he goes to the mound and put him at ease?

Tracy answered that one right away. "I can convince a pitcher," he says, "that he'll hear only the voices of his teammates and concentrate on his job so thoroughly he will not hear anything said by any one else."

A-ha. Then there will be no rabbit-ears among the Brownies, delicately tuned to those insults from the opposing bench or the fans. That could be the doctor's greatest contribution—shutting out the razzberries that might unnerve 'em.

If so, Dr. Tracy appeared on the scene 16 years too late to do Schoolboy Rowe any good. It was Rowe, you remember, who after the Tigers won the 1934 pennant, exclaimed in a radio interview, "How'm I doin', Edna?" by way of saying hello to his wife. In the World Series that year, the Cardinals adopted "How'm I doin', Edna" as their theme song every time Rowe stuck his nose out of the dugout and he couldn't pitch for getting mad about it.

BUT THE DeWitt brothers, who own the Browns, and engaged Dr. Tracy, apparently don't have complete faith in him yet else they might have called him in to settle their holdout troubles with Pitcher Al Widmar. He hasn't signed yet, and if hypnosis has occurred to the DeWitts, they must be doubtful of the good doctor's powers to meet the fellow's demands.

And somehow, such old-fashioned realists as Casey Stengel, Joe McCarthy and Clark Griffith, can't quite vision the Browns as a pennant threat despite their new-found powers of concentration. In fact, they place no great store in this business of relaxing, and Griffith suggests, "It can be carried too far. The time to relax is after you win a ball game, not during it."

The Browns will need the deaf ears that Dr. Tracy says he can give 'em, too. Ball players read the papers and they know about this hypnotic stuff that's going on. And sometimes they're quite unfeeling. The first time a Brownie pitcher winds up when the season starts, he'll be told "relax, concentrate, go into your act!" And if he doesn't hear it, the way ball players can shout, he ain't alive, so he poses no problem anyway.

Griff Wants Newsom But Harris Is Cool

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 15—That Washington pitching—a horrible thought to Manager Bucky Harris—will be the object of dead aim in the next five days by the Yankees, the Cardinals, the Reds, the Tigers and the Red Sox.

At the end of the ordeal, into which he will toss all of his available talent, Harris will have a better—or worse—idea of what he has to work with.

He has 14 hurlers in camp, scrambling for jobs, and never were they so wide open. Beyond Ray Scarborough, there is none who is a fixture, and that is what troubles Harris. He's yearning for some solid characters.

Faster, Better Control

Harris today watched the pitcher who could probably win him a lot of games, but it was without much enthusiasm. Buck Newsom, a-hankering for a job with the Nats, was on the mound in batting practice and gleefully showing a better fast ball and finer control than any other pitcher in camp, hopeful that both Harris and Clark Griffith were watching.

They were, but with mixed reactions. Griffith would sign Newsom in a minute. Harris would like to have a pitcher of Newsom's solidity, but he doesn't want Newsom, a managerial headache with his quaint habits of creating personnel problems.

Al Evans, who was catching Newsom, frankly declared, "Scarborough and Bobo are the best pitchers in this camp." But if Harris has his way, Newsom's efforts will be in vain. He flatly doesn't want Bobo, at least until his desperate situation gets more desperate. Newsom is technically the property of the Chattanooga club, but can get his release.

Welteroth Gets Chance

Meanwhile, Harris is speculating on the possibility that he can develop young Dick Welteroth as one of his starting pitchers. He has been apprised that Manager Joe Kuhel handled the fast-balling rookie somewhat dubiously last year, overworking him in relief roles.

"I'm thinking Welteroth is a starting pitcher," says Harris. "He has that good pitch, and a lot of poise, and I'd say he isn't bothered much by lack of control. Maybe he'll be the kid that will make our pitching look better."

Right now, as Harris visualizes his staff, it appears that he will count on a starting five of Scarborough, Sid Hudson, Rookie Steve Nagy, Welteroth, and Lloyd Hittle or Joe Haynes. He has designated Mickey Harris as his No. 1 relief man. Where the Cuban sensation, Corado Marrero will fit in, Harris doesn't know yet, but the canny right-hander won't lack for opportunity to move into a job.

IN SHORT: Tomorrow the Nats move to St. Pete for an afternoon game with Yankees, and they meet the Cardinals the next day. On Saturday it will be the Reds at Tampa, where headquarters will be maintained for the three days . . . on Sunday they bus back to Orlando to play the Tigers, and then go back to the Florida west coast on Monday to play the Red Sox at Sarasota . . . Clark Griffith was gloomy today. Roberto Fernandez, the big Cuban outfielder who hit .408 (honest) in the West Texas League, silently stole out of the Chattanooga farm team's camp . . . He returned to Havana, claiming he was a free agent because Chattanooga had not sent him a contract . . . That club shows the postal receipt for a contract sent him in February.

Joe Collins, Coleman Get 4-Run Blows

Clearwater, Fla., March 15 (AP).—The World's Champion New York Yankees pounded out 20 hits, including two grand slam homers, to crush the Philadelphia Phillies, 23-6, today.

Rookie First Baseman Joe Collins hit the first four-bagger with the bases full in the third inning. Gerry Coleman connected for a round-tripper with the bases loaded in the fourth inning.

Russ Meyer, who came to Bill Kozarek's relief in the third inning, was the victim of both blows. Kozarek had relieved Curt Simmons in the second. Buzz Bowers, who took over the Phils' pitching duties in the sixth, limited the Yanks to three runs aid four hits the rest of the way.

Bosox Win 4th in Row As Cards Walk 13

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 15 (AP).—St. Louis Cardinal pitchers gave up 13 bases on balls today as the Boston Red Sox scored their fourth straight victory, 11 to 4. It was the Cards' third reverse at the hands of American League opposition.

The Red Sox iced the game in the fifth frame when they counted five runs, aided by seven passes by Bill Reeder. Dom DiMaggio led the 15-hit assault by the Cape Cod crew with three singles and a double.

For $232,000

S. G. Leoffler Willing to Quit, He Says

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Possessor of a new and more favorable agreement to continue operation of local public golf courses, Severine G. Leoffler, sr., asserted yesterday that he's "willing to step out at any time."

All that he asks is to be paid off approximately $232,000.

In effect, this seems to mean that the golf czar here since 1921 is as firmly entrenched as a golf ball on his worst sand trap.

Leoffler figures that the sum he advanced for the construction of the Fort Dupont course and clubhouse approximates $80,000. He recently had all his equipment appraised at $152,000.

The new pact made with the Interior Department and approved by the D. C. Recreation Board provides rate increases averaging 37 percent and a $3000 pay boost for Leoffler.

Boost May Bring $50,000

Leoffler's expansive mood yesterday reflected these terms. He estimated that the boost in fees could up his gross $50,000 or more this year. His new salary is $11,500.

"I'm glad it's settled," Leoffler said. "After all, I couldn't go along indefinitely without a contract. I think the agreement's all right. You have to give a little and take a little in these things."

Leoffler also was quick to caution that the rate increase won't mean that his profits will soar. "Costs are going up and overtime provisions and other restrictions on me will eat up most of the surplus," he said.

Leoffler admitted his $80,000 estimate for Fort Dupont exceeds an Interior Department figure of $67,000.

"We differ on exceptions taken by Interior," he explained, "I think it will take an impartial board of certified public accountants to determine a sum."

Whatever amount finally is agreed upon will be a sizeable one for the D. C. Recreation Board to try to get out of the District Appropriations Committee.

Agreement Pleases Board

The agreement provides that the Recreation Board can take over next January 1—if it can assume financial responsibility. This appears remote and the board already has agreed not to take over until the end of a calendar year. This indicates that even the board doesn't expect to be ready by next year.

However, recreation officials, highly critical of Leoffler's operation in the past, insist that the new agreement is a good one. They say it's bringing the day closer that they can take over.

Milo Christiansen, recreation superintendent, calls the agreement the best ever made in the interest of public golfers.

Christiansen said, "The rehabilitation clause provides that 5 percent of the gross receipts must be spent on the courses. If it isn't, it will revert to the Government. This insures good maintenance.

"The Recreation Board plans to watch closely operation of the golf courses. We also want to assume full control as soon as it's practical."

Caps Drubbed, 93-64, Held to 5 In 2d Period

The Caps rolled over and played dead to the Rochester Royals last night at Uline Arena, and there were only 511 mourners.

Rochester made its sixth straight triumph a decisive 93-64 conquest after a Washington scoring famine saw it score only 5 points in the second period for an all-time low.

The Royals, who still have a chance to overtake Minneapolis for the Central Division title, worth $2000 to the wining team, didn't even miss their injured scoring ace, Bob Davies.

The Caps made only 19 of 79 field goal attempts and played a passing and floor game to match. Taking only 11 more shots, Rochester tallied 42 field goals.

Fraud, Cum Laude

There Is No Joy in Terpville—The Great O'Rourke Bows Out

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

FROM THE STIFF-STREWN heights of the anatomy building to the book-laden shelves of the library, there was nothing but grief at Maryland University last night.

Dick (The Great) O'Rourke turned out to be a fraud. The self-proclaimed sensational southpaw confessed he hadn't pitched eight straight no-hit, no-run, no-man to first games.

"It was a fib," he solemnly announced, "I only pitched three. Hang me, if you wish, but I had to confess."

Since Sunday, when students first read of the sensational exploits of this real-life Ozark Ike from White Plains, N. Y., Ready Richard was a hero magna cum laude.

HE WAS GREETED on the campus with "Hi Ace," "Howdy Lefty, how's the arm?" "Good to see you, Rube," "You're a cinch to win 30," and other endearing terms. Student organizations were clamoring to pay tribute to this modest, 19-year-old Irish lad.

They were ready to hang Burt Shipley, Maryland baseball coach, from the yardarm, for dropping the Great O'Rourke from the Terps baseball squad.

O'Rourke said Shipley booted him off because he took a windup with a man on first base, "Heck," O'Rourke had explained, "I've never had a man on first base before, Coach, I've pitched eight straight perfect games!"

LAST NIGHT, the O'Rourke saga reached its peak. Ready Richard was guest of honor at a sorority autograph party. It was there, at this festive occasion, that he made his mournful announcement.

"Guess I let my imagination run away with me," the athletic Walter Mitty sobbed. "I hope I haven't let you down too much. I'm really sorry."

He also admitted that the real reason he was cut off the baseball squad was because he had missed three practices, as Shipley had said.

Trouper that he is, the apologetic O'Rourge once again became the Great O'Rourke in the midst of his darkest hour.

"I'VE TOLD you that I didn't pitch eight straight no-hitters, only three," he said, "but, baby, those three were really beauts."

Before he could fire another fast-ball at his suddenly-comealive audience three husky students rushed up and grabbed him.

"O. K., Dick," they said, "your initiation is over. You carried out your part in great style. You're in the fraternity now."

'Thanks For Lesson,' Dutch Say

Yank Hockey Team Wallops Holland, 17-1; Canada Romps

London, March 15 (U.P.).—Canada and the United States scored smashing triumphs tonight in the world ice hockey championships at Wembley's Empire Pool. The Canucks swamping Belgium, 33 to 0, while the United States trounced Holland 17 to 1.

Both Canada and the United States will appear in the final pool starting Friday.

The Canadians, who notched their first goal after 15 seconds of playing time, looked as if they could have scored 100 goals against the outclassed Belgians. Canada tallied 14 goals in the first period, 10 in the second and nine in the last.

The United States had little trouble subduing a weak but enthusiastic Holland sextet in the first game, 17 to 1.

The win gave the United States a score of one victory and one defeat in the preliminary pool after the schedule scramble resulting from the refusal of the Czech government to permit its title-holding team to journey here for the defense of its championship.

Also in the final pool were Sweden, which beat the erratic American All-Stars 8 to 3, Norway, Great Britain, Switzerland and Canada, the hot favorite for the title.

Just before the game started, the Dutch team presented the Americans with a souvenir dish of Delft China prophetically inscribed: "Thanks for the lessons you have taught us."

Corpus Christi Refuses 6 Who Jumped Tulsa

Corpus Christi, Tex., March 15 (AP).—Six Tulsa University football players who jumped spring training to enter the University of Corpus Christi decided today to go back to Tulsa.

Their decision came after University of Corpus Christi authorities said they couldn't enroll here.

The six players include James Prewitt, 235, of Smackover, Ark., and Floyd Harrawood, 255, of Harlan, Kans., starting defensive tackles for J. O. (Buddy) Brother's Golden Hurricane. Others are Eddie Ware, 200-pound end from Carthage, Miss.; George Coldiron, 155-pound halfback from Harlan, Kans.; Tom Hamm, 220-pound guard from Corinth, Miss., and Bob Miles, 220-pound tackle from Missoula, Mont.

District AAU Wrestlers Meet

Three 1949 winners will be on hand to defend their District of Columbia AAU wrestling titles when the annual championship tourney opens this afternoon at the University of Maryland's Ritchie Coliseum at 2:30 o'clock.

Seeking repeats are Joe Adleberg, 155-pounder, and Heavyweight Chris Matthews, both of the University of Maryland, and Camille Desmarais, 121-pound champ from Gallaudet.

'Team of Destiny?'

Duquesne Proves How Good CCNY Is in NIT Game Tonight

New York, March 15 (AP).—Are CCNY's redhot sophomores the "team of destiny" of the Thirteenth National Invitation Basketball Tournament?

Kentucky's Proud Of Its Team, Suh, Won't Lower Flag

Frankfort, Ky., March 15 (AP).—The State Senate shouted down a resolution today to lower the flag on the State Capitol to half mast in mourning of Kentucky's stunning defeat last night in the National Invitational Basketball tournament.

Kentucky bowed to City College of New York, 89-50.

Senator Rodes K. Myers moved to table the resolution with the comment it was "adding insult to injury." Myers is from Bowling Green, home of the Western Kentucky cage crew which lost earlier this week in the N. I. T. to St. Johns.

Senator C. W. A. McCann (D., Louisville) proposed the resolution.

Joe Judge, former Nat firt baseman, and Jim Castiglia, former Redskin fullback, will be guests 8 o'clock tonight at the Cave Dwellers Club of Catholic University smoker at the Washington American Legion Post, 224 D st. se.

Old Ebbitt Wins Title

Old Ebbitt Grill defeated Veterans of Foreign Wars, All-American Post, 42-31, yesterday for the D. C. Recreation Department's McKinley Tech basketball league championship at Tech gym.

Coach Forrest Anderson of Bradley's top-seeded entry, who has watched Nat Holman's young speedsters win two impressive victories, says "perhaps." "They're playing the best basketball we've seen," he commented.

Holman himself says, "we'll see." He acknowledges City is playing the best basketball of the campaign.

The City College of New York team that has captured the imagination of the fans will learn part of the answer tomorrow night when it meets Duquesne's deliberate "Iron Men" in the semi-finals.

The game at 8 p. m. (EST) will open the doubleheader program that also will send Bradley against St. John's of Brooklyn (at 9:45 p. m.), another high-spirited local power whose enthusiasm is fanned by hometown acclaim.

Despite City's smashing triumphs over Defending Champion San Francisco and Kentucky, the bookmakers rated the Beavers just even with the Pittsburgh Dukes. Bradley's poised veterans rate a four-point edge over St. John's.

Walsh, D. C. Marine, 4th in National Pistol

Tampa, Fla., March 15 (AP).—Lieut. Col. Walter Walsh of Marine Headquarters, Washington, D. C., held fourth place after two days of the National Midwinter Pistol matches here today. Walsh scored 1727, trailing Sgt. H. L. Benner of Fort Knox, 1744; Harry Reeves of Detroit, 1739 and Alfred Hemming of Detroit 1731.

Davis-Elkins Wins in NAIB

Kansas City, March 15 (AP).—Hamline, defending champion and top-seeded, was knocked out of the NAIB basketball tourney tonight by Central Missouri of Fayette, 76-66.

It culminated a day of upsets in which unheralded Davis-Elkins advanced to the quarterfinals with an 85-75 victory over Westminster, top-seeded in the lower bracket and considered a definite contender.

Tomorrow, Davis-Elkins meets Tampa which upset Pepperdine, 69-61. Pepperdine ousted American U. in the first round.

Seminick Signs, Receives $12,500

Clearwater, Fla., March 15 (AP).—Andy Seminick came to terms with President Robert R. M. Carpenter, Jr., of the Philadelphia Phillies today.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed, but it was reported unofficially the big catcher received $12,500, a compromise between the $15,000 he asked and the $10,000 Carpenter offered.

Southworth, Braves Seem Like Old Selves

By Red Smith

SMITH

TAMPA, FLA., March 15 (NYHT).—A year ago the Boston Braves were defending champions of the National League and when mouthpieces for other ball clubs babbled of their own pennant prospects, Billy Southworth chuckled contentedly. "We've got the pennant," the Boston manager would say. "It's up to them to take it away from us."

When the season opened, though, there was a critical shortage of doves and olive branches around Braves field. By August Southworth was on his way home to Columbus, Ohio, with a wild glaze in his eyes and a wide crack in his health. The Braves finished fourth, 22 games behind the Dodgers.

Now Southworth and his health and his confidence are back. Everything he says and does reflects his resolution that the disasters of 1949 must not occur again. Physically, he never has looked better. Such is his energy that he celebrated his fifty-seventh birthday a few days ago with an exhibition of sliding into bases, hurling himself along the ground like a kid of 20. Sam Jethroe, the swift Negro rookie who stole 89 bases for Montreal last season, sought to emulate him and came up rubbing what ball players call a "strawberry" bruise on his hip.

"That's nothing," Jethroe said. "End of last season, I had a tail full of strawberries."

"SOUTHWORTH HAS BEEN in wonderful spirits every day," Sid Gordon, the retreaded Giant, was saying today. "He's going to be a wonderful guy to play for, nice bunch of guys on the club. I'm going to like this team."

It is not unlikely that the customers will like the team, too. It looks like a pennant contender in every department save pitching. The only important winners of last year were Warren Spahn and Vern Bickford. Even if Johnny Sain, who won only 10 games in 1949, rejoins the 20-victory class, more help will be needed.

However, the club whose average age was highest in the league last year, now has the youngest squad in any training camp. Del Crandall, the catcher, celebrated his twentieth birthday 10 days ago. Eight players at the party were younger than he.

After Earl Torgeson, the first baseman, was injured last summer, the Braves had only one batsman who represented a serious home run threat—Bob Elliott. Now four come to the plate in order—Willard Marshall, Elliott, Sid Gordon and Torgeson. Perhaps Jethroe can be added to this group, for he made 17 home runs while hitting .326 for Montreal.

This young man has to prove himself a hitter, though. He's not much of a fielder, has no throwing arm to speak of, and although a fellow with his speed should be able to bunt .300, he doesn't know how to bunt. He's obviously nervous about his chance in the big league.

A LOT OF PEOPLE think Del Crandall is the finest young catcher in baseball. He was playing Class C ball in Evansville, Ind., last summer when Boston farm agents wanted to bring him to the majors.

"I don't want a kid like that wasting his time on the bench," Southworth said then. "I don't want him unless he's ready to step in and catch regularly. Are you sure he's ready?"

The scouts said yes. Crandall came up and took charge. He is a grand thrower. Among catchers who played all summer, only Roy Campanella and Andy Seminick had more assists than Crandall made in half a season.

"He gets down nice and low behind the plate," remarked the old pitcher, Waite Hoyt, watching him. "Lower than anybody I've seen since Val Picinich. That's good for the pitcher; gives him a target down there where he wants to throw the ball. These big standup catchers make a deceptive target because they're this broad and the strike zone is only half as wide."

Hoyt rambled on about how a pitcher and catcher could help each other by working intelligently.

"Trouble with this game," he said, "is the adolescents in it, fellows whose bodies have grown up but their minds haven't. Take a man like Carl Hubbell, who matured mentally as he reached his peak physically, and you've got a great player. After all, it doesn't require extraordinary intellect."

"No," a guy told Waite, "If the game were as mental as some people say, a lot of you guys wouldn't even get in."

Quattrocchi Is Maryland's Chief Hope

The University of Maryland shoots for Louisiana State's championship in the Southern Intercollegiate invitational boxing tournament tonight through Saturday at Columbia, S. C.

The eight-man Terp squad, led by 130-pound knockout artist Andy Quattrocchi, enplaned for Columbia late last night. They will arrive in plenty of time for this afternoon's weigh-ins.

The seven other schools which have entered are Miami, the Citadel, Mississippi Southern, East Carolina Teachers, Virginia Tech Virginia and South Carolina.

Quattrocchi and four of his mates drew first round byes and were promoted to Friday night's semifinals. Three Terps will participate in tonight's opening round activities, however.

Paul Kostopolos takes on L. S. U.'s Tom Thrower in the 135-pound class, Bob Smith tackles Virginia Tech light-heavy Bob Fraker, and George (Baby Face) Fuller fights South Carolina's Lou Harrelson tonight.

Terps assured of semifinal berths are Al Glass (125), who meets East Carolina's Cleon Smith, Quattrocchi (130) who meets Citadel's Hugh Cotton, Bill O'Brien (145) who opposes Citadel's Tom Wiggins, Don Oliver (155), who boxes Citadel's Ray Heatley, and Capt. Bob Gregson (165) who fights Miami's Jim Bernardo.

Middlecoff's 207 Wins Seminole Golf Title

Palm Beach, Fla., March 15 (AP).—Cary Middlecoff, who gave up dentistry for golf, carded a two under par, 36-34—70, today to win top money in both the medal play and pro-amateur competition in the eleventh annual $10,000 Seminole Golf Tournament.

The Ormond Beach, Fla., professional, last year's U. S. Open champion, won $1500 for his aggregate of 207 in the 54-hole medal competition among 42 of the nation's leading pros and another $1250 for his tie in the 36-hole pro-amateur contest.

Middlecoff and C. Douglas Dillon, stock broker from New York City, carded a best-ball of 33-32—65 to finish at 128 in a tie with Jim Ferrier and his partner, Leray Berdeau, Palm Beach and Paris, France.

Also at 209, for which each received 662.50, were Roberto De Vincenzo, Buenos Aires; Lew Worsham of Washington, D. C., and Henry Picard of Los Angeles, Calif.

Five professionals tied for third money at 211 for which they received $290. They were Claude Harmon, resident professional; Jimmy Demaret, Ojai, Calif; Henry Ransom, St. Andrews, Ill., Pete Cooper, Ponte Vedra, Fla., and Dick Mayer, Harmon's assistant pro at the Seminole Club.

Sam Snead, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., picked up on the 15th hole after playing a brand of golf below his usual standards. Ben Hogan, Hershey, Pa., making his first appearance in competition since the playoff of the Los Angeles Open, carded a 220 for his 54 holes, including his two under par 70 round today.

N.Y. Assembly Would Ban Bums' Double-Admission Doubleheaders

Albany, N. Y., March 15 (AP).—Double-admission doubleheaders at Ebbets Field, home of baseball's Brooklyn Dodgers, would be banned by a bill passed by the Assembly today. The bill was sent to the Senate today.

The sponsor of the bill is Assemblyman Lawrence P. Murphy, Brooklyn Democrat.

He said the measure was aimed at what he called the "common practice" in Brooklyn of playing morning and afternoon games, or afternoon and evening games on doubleheader days. Fans must pay two admissions to see both games.

Murphy, who says he's a Dodger fan, contends a doubleheader means two games for the price of one.

Greenleaf Dies; Billiards' Great

Philadelphia, March 15 (AP).—Ralph Greenleaf, 13 times world's pocket billiard champion, died today in Hahnemann Hospital. He was 50.

He died 15 minutes after his wife took him to the hospital. His determination to play a match in New York tonight prevented her from having him admitted to a hospital earlier today.

Easter Drives In 5 for Tribe

Tucson, Ariz., March 15 (AP).—Big Luke Easter, the Cleveland Indians outfielder, drove in five runs today as the Tribe came from behind in the ninth to defeat the Oakland Oaks of the Pacific Coast League 12 to 11.

The victory also featured four innings of encouraging hurling by Bob Feller who is seeking to enter the 20-game winning ranks again. Feller allowed three hits in his four innings.

Irv Bridgers Wins Diving Title

Irving Bridgers of Ambassador won the District of Columbia A.A.U. senior low board diving championship for the ninth straight year by scoring 101 points last night at Ambassador pool.

Two of Bridgers' teammates, Paul Fite and Dean Hold took second and third with 81.8 and 79.4 points.

The women's senior low board crown was won by Maura Silverman, 17-year-old Woodrow Wilson High senior. She scored 40.4 points. Trailing her were Gloria Dirr with 39.0 and Roberta Ashburner with 35.8. Maura and Roberta are members of Ambassador and Gloria is from Takoma Club.

Bryant Honored At Boys Club Banquet Tonight

Calvin Bryant, 15, will be awarded a trophy as outstanding member of the Georgetown Boys Club tonight at the Big Brothers Club's seventh annual banquet tonight at the Continental Hotel.

Calvin, a student of Chamberlain Vocational High, lives at 2410 Pennsylvania ave. nw. He was a member of the club's baseball, basketball and football teams, and was also active in library, workshop, health, and Junior Optimist Club programs.

Principal speaker will be Bob Margarita, football coach at Georgetown University.

Eastern Boys Oust Ballston

Bob Lipscomb scored 18 points to pace the Eastern Branch 153-pound team to a 67-42 win over the Ballston Indians in a DCAAU tournament quarter-final basketball game last night at the Eastern Branch Boys Club of Washington court.

In other quarter-final games in other weight brackets, the Eastern Branch 97-pound team dumped Police Boys Club No. 12, 36-20; Police Boys Club No. 10 beat Alexandria Boys Club, 34-25, in a 112-pound game and the 127-pound contest saw Georgetown Branch rout the Ballston Indians, 55-22.

Theory Bows To $20 Shot At Florida

Miami, Fla., March 15 (AP).—The Kentucky Derby stock of Calumet Farms' Theory took another tumble today when the colt lost a neck decision to Black George in the $5000 Fountain of Youth handicap at Gulfstream Park.

Theory, odds-on favorite at 1 to 2 among the 12,157 attending the midweek program, had no excuse except that he was packing top weight of 123 pounds.

Wilburton Farm's Erosion was third in the field of six 3-year-olds in the 7-furlong dash.

Black George, owned by William H. Veeneman, chairman of the board at Churchill Downs, was ridden by Ken Church and covered the 7 furlongs in 1:23 2/5 over a fast track. He paid $20, $4.50, $3.

Theory returned $2.50 and $2.20 and Erosion paid $2.80 to show.

It was Theory's first start since he ran third to Oil Capitol and Lotowhite in the $50,000 Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah on March 3.

Kramer Sets Tennis Style

Tennis, following the pattern of football and basketball, is placing new emphasis on offense at the expense of defense, and Jack Kramer is setting the style.

That's the opinion of Mrs. Bobby Riggs, advance agent for the pro tennis troupe which stops at Uline Arena Friday night for an exhibition. Kramer and Pancho Gonzales are the featured stars.

The wife of the former Davis Cup ace arrived in town yesterday. She's watched most of the 87 matches between Kramer and Gonzales on their Nation-wide tour.

"Kramer has brought a new style of offensive play into tennis with his knack of serving and simultaneously rushing the net," she said.

"This eliminates a lot of defensive play, makes for a wide open offense and speeds up the game for the spectators," she explained.

"But don't count Gonzales out," cautions Mrs. Riggs. "He's vastly improved over the Gonzales who was here last time. He's giving Kramer fits with his cannon ball serve.

"The other day in Miami, Pancho scored 20 aces in his first 21 services, and went on to win, 6—2, 5—7 and 6—3," said Mrs. Riggs.

Sunny South, Alapay Lead Futile Chase

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., March 15. Queen May, beaten when she had poor racing luck in her first outing here, came back to the winner's circle today after taking the feature event in the colors of S. Delisi.

The 4-year-old filly was ridden out by Jockey Johnny Regalbuto and was 2½ lengths ahead of M. I. Brook's Sunny South with F. J. Wilson's Alapay third.

Queen May operated in the role of an odds-on favorite and returned a $3.60 mutuel to her legion of backers. The daughter of Alaking was clocked in 1.22 2/5 for the 6½ furlongs over a fast track and under clear skies.

Queen May Leads Throughout

It was a case of chasing Queen May from the first turn to the finish. Sunny South made several bids but his only reward was the place money and four weary legs. Alapay was always third and could not better the position when placed to pressure.

Another winner was added to the long Washington list. The Capital City-owned She's Scotch, carrying the colors of the Teaville Farms, took the seventh event by 2½ lengths with Mrs. G. A. Saportas, jr.'s Pay in Advance second, and Arthur Augusta's Colored Boy third in the field of eight.

The second disqualification in two days and the third of the meeting came with the running of the fifth race.

Jockey Jimmy Baird got home in front for the fourteenth time at the meeting but his victory on J. B. Royston's Whizz Happy didn't stick. The 6-year-old plater swung wide into the stretch forcing out H. J. Elliott's Corinth which was beaten by a half length.

Pikor's Objection Sustained

Lou Pikor, Corinth's rider, lodged an objection which was sustained by the stewards. Corinth was awarded first money with Whizz Happy shunted into the place. R. C. Norris' Demaris was third in the field of eight, going about 4½ furlongs. Corinth paid $6.20 and the running time was :50 4/5.

The $12 pay-off on the daily double was the result of favorites winning the first and second events. Justin Funkhouser's Maid's Son, with Jimmy McDermott up, was the four-length winner in the opener.

The second test was a thriller, with Halogi, owned by S. H. Rogers of Washington, D. C., and ridden by Jimmy Baird, gaining a nose decision over J. K. Wynkoop's War Spy.

DEAR FOLKS

An official here wants to bet even money that 50 would-be customers show up for the Maryland opening a week from Saturday at Bowie instead of Laurel. "There's bound to be that many who will be swayed by force of habit after all these years," he said. Art (WWDC) Brown showed up for the Tuesday program bringing Charlie Schrider, his engineer, with him for borrowing purposes. They arrived talking horses and left talking to themselves. Jockey George Miller has signed to ride for George E. Harris for the next two meetings. East View Stable's Navy Dance was running a courageous race and apparently a winning race, when she broke down badly in the third event. A mercy needle was applied. See you at the rail,

BILL.

New President's Cup Regatta Head Opposes Trophy Return

A ruling of the American Power Boat Association that Horace Dodge, wealthy Detroit speedboat racer, return the President's Cup which he won last fall, yesterday met the opposition of regatta officials here.

"We don't want it back," said Eric Greenleaf, general chairman of the regatta.

Edward C. Baltz, elected president of the regatta association yesterday at the Carlton Hotel, added he would not press Dodge for return of the big gold trophy.

The A. P. B. A.'s inboard racing commission voted in Los Angeles to require that Dodge return the prize because of "several protests" of the fact only one heat out of the scheduled three was held here in September.

Dodge's gold cup boat, "My Sweetie" won the lone heat here as rough weather forced cancellation of the remainder of the program. Dodge set a lap and heat record, and the race committee agreed he should receive the cup, later presented to him by President Truman.

Regulations set forth at the Detroit Gold Cup races specify that three heats must be held before a Gold Cup class race is considered official. Hence the lone heat here constituted no contest, according to A. P. B. A.

At the Regatta Association luncheon yesterday, the following officers were elected:

Edward C. Baltz, president; Edgar Morris, vice president; Robert V. Fleming, treasurer; and Hon. Oscar L. Chapman, Herbert F. Corn, L. Gordon Leech and Willian C. Shelton, directors.

Also reelected to the board of directors by the membership present were Eric R. Greenleaf, James A. Councilor, Leon Chatelain, Edmund F. Jewell, P. Y. K. Howat, William J. McManus, Frank E. Weakly, Anthony Muto, Leonard P. Walsh, Max Farrington, Maj. Robert Barrett, Carter Barron, Jack Blank, Robert V. Fleming, Clarence Arata, Wash B. Williams, J. O'Connor Roberts. In addition two new directors elected were John M. Christy and William O. Herrmann.

Reappointed to the Board of Directors by the Corinthian Yacht Club were John A. Remon and Commodore J. D. Miller. Mr. Remon, former president of the association for many years, will continue as honorary president.

At a board of directors meeting immediately following the annual meeting Eric Greenleaf was appointed general chairman of regatta events, James A. Councilor was appointed comptroller and Vincent P. Walter was appointed executive secretary, and John M. Christy was appointed assistant treasury and Mrs. Edna H. Nick was appointed assistant comptroller.

Tentative dates for this year's regatta events are September 16 and 17 for power boat events and September 23 and 24 for sailing.

Fairfax Asks New Lot Size Requirements

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors yesterday moved to prevent the building of any home on a lot of less than 10,000 square feet.

In an unscheduled action, the board directed that an ordinance be drafted that would require lot sizes of 10,000, 15,000 and 20,000 square feet. The 15,000 square feet is a new classification.

Another provision of the ordinance will shift certain requirements now fastened to the 7200 square feet lot to the 10,000 square feet size: the latter must have curbs and gutters, water and sewage facilities, and black topping on roads in the future.

Used in Low-Cost Units

The 7200 square feet lot (60 by 120 feet) has been generally used in large, low-cost housing developments, Herbert F. Schumann, county planning engineer, said. The majority are in urban areas of the county near Alexandria and off the intersection of Lee blvd. and the Falls Church-Annandale rd.

Chairman G. Wallace Carper said "the 7200 square feet lot just about comes down to row houses," Carper declared. "I don't think land is that scarce in Fairfax County."

Other Business

In other business, the board:

Was urged by Van C. Adams, Alexandria Hospital administrator, to set aside funds for the hospital in the county's upcoming budget. He said the hospital's charity losses in 1949 through caring for Fairfax County indigents came to more than $9000.

Rezoned a 17-acre tract on the west side of Shirley hgy. at Franconia rd. to permit construction of a shopping district there.

Approved preliminary plans for a county building code and took under consideration an ordinance to regulate sanitary fills.

Patent Office Examiner, 50, Commits Suicide

Audley H. Greenwood, 50, an examiner in the Patent Office for 20 years, took his life yesterday in Arlington by swallowing poison.

His body was found at 6:45 a. m. by his wife, Letha, in a garage at their home at 1719 N. Glebe rd. She told police he had been in ill health recently.

Born in McKeesport, Pa., Greenwood came to Washington in 1909. He was a graduate of McKinley Tech and George Washington University and held a law degree from National University. He was a member of the District Bar Association.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by two brothers and three sisters, all of whom live in Washington.

They are Robert M. Greenwood of 2004 37th st. nw.; W. Barton Greenwood of 5311 Massachusetts ave. nw.; Mrs. Marie L. Ward of 2039 37th st. nw.; Mrs. Elsie L. Grady of 330 Rhode Island ave. nw. and Mrs. Gertrude Murray of 3409 30th st. nw.

Retreat Set for GU Seniors

The Rev. Daniel A. Lord, S.J., editor of the "Queen's Work" and a widely known Catholic author, will conduct a spiritual retreat for Georgetown College seniors Friday, March 31 to Sunday, April 2.

Fairfax Man Surrenders, Charged in Slaying Attempt

A 35-year-old Fairfax County husband was charged with the attempted murder of his estranged wife last night shortly after he surrendered voluntarily to Arlington police.

The warrant, sworn out by his wife, Mrs. Enid Via, mother of two children, followed a shooting shortly after 4 p. m.

Witnesses reported a man blasted off the door at 1123 Kentucky st., North Arlington, with a shotgun charge, and fired several charges inside before fleeing.

Less than an hour later, Joseph Via, 35, of Lord Fairfax dr. Vienna, showed up voluntarily at Arlington County jail. He surrendered, but admitted nothing. He was accompanied by a lawyer, Frank Ball, jr.

The Kentucky street address is the home of a sister of Mrs. Via's, Mrs. Gilbert C. Harrell, with whom she and her 11-year-old daughter had been living for the past month, according to neighbors. Mrs. Via was in the house at the time of the shooting.

Via, a linoleum helper, was to be held in Arlington County jail for a hearing today at 9 a. m.

Police reported that four empty shells from a 12-gauge shotgun were found on the porch of the dwelling, and that the living room was "all scarred up." The shotgun was also discovered in two pieces. No one was apparently hurt, according to the police reports.

Major Employe Story Of Year Due From House Appropriations Group

Federal employe eyes are centered on the House Appropriations Committee. That is where the major employe story of the year is due to break in a few days.

It's an open secret that the powerful committee will attempt to bring about the firings of thousands of Federal workers by reducing the President's budget. It's merely a question of how many jobs it will attempt to abolish.

You can hear rumors on Capitol Hill that the number will be from 50,000 to 100,000; that the President's budget will be slashed between one and two billion dollars. Any major budget reduction would be reflected in fewer employes.

In drafting a single money bill, the committee is reported to have rejected nearly all requests for additional funds to expand agency staffs, and to have either denied or sharply cut back requests for new activities.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation may be one of the few agencies to get additional money to hire more people. The moderate expansions proposed by the President for Internal Revenue, Agriculture, and a score of the independent agencies are not likely to be approved.

The Census Bureau will get some money to hire a big temporary staff here and in Philadelphia to tabulate and analyze this year's census results, but not as much as it asked for. The Post-office Department is reported to be slated for a reduction. It usually gets all the money it needs from Congress with the minimum of trouble.

The President proposed a reduction of roughly 10,000 full-time Federal employes in the budget he sent to Congress in January. He suggested slight personnel increases for the independent agencies and old-line departments be more than offset by reductions in the Army, Navy, and Air Force.

STORY: Dave Kandel brightens the day with his verses, BOSS THEN AND NOW.

He used to take his pen in hand
In days of old granpap
Times have changed, and now he takes
A steno in his lap.

FCC: At Federal Communications Commission, these key appointments have been made as a result of a reorganization along functional lines: Benedict P. Cottone, general counsel; William J. Norfleet, chief accountant; Curtis B. Plummer, chief engineer; John A. Willoughby, assistant chief engineer; J. Fred Johnson, chief hearing examiner; William K. Holl, executive officer in charge of administration, and Harold J. Cohen, chief of the new common carrier bureau.

NOTES: Another committee may be set up to make a study of Interior's Reclamation Service and the Army's river and harbor functions. The Hoover Commission want them merged under Interior . . . Ray Hallbeck of the AFL's postal clerks, is the sparkplug behind the bill to get World War II veterans in the postal service credit toward automatic promotions for time served in the armed forces . . . Representative Holifield (D., Calif.) has in a bill to set up a traffic service in the new General Services agency. He points out Uncle Sam spends a billion dollars annually to move public property. He estimates from 200 to 250 millions could be saved by an effective traffic service that would obtain more favorable rates.

LETTER: "Someone in authority must have it in for the Bureau of Employes Compensation. The bureau was "exiled" to New York in 1942 for the next six years. It ceased to be an independent agency in 1946 when the bureau was transferred to the Federal Security Agency, and it has been reorganized internally since that time.

"Now the BEC is to be sent to the Labor Department as it needs bolstering. This move won't save taxpayers a single penny. It will cost money, in fact, to move personnel and equipment. The demoralizing effect of all the reorganizations on BEC employes is unnecessary."

Irish to Fete Saint Whose Memory Is Ever Green

Variety of Events Planned for Friday, St. Patrick's Day, by Sons of Auld Sod

Today is the day before the day regarded as The Day by millions who can find the slightest trace of Irish in their ancestry—and others who apparently would like to.

Plans for religious, social and fraternal functions in honor of St. Patrick, patron saint of the Emerald Isle, foretell a grand and glorious wearin' o' the green.

Emphasizing the international as well as the provincial eminence of the old sod will be a gathering tonight at the United Nations Club, 19th and R sts. nw.

Club members, their guests and members of the Irish Legation will see movies of the old country, with Sean Hayden, of the legation staff, as commentator. There will be a program of Irish songs and dances.

Dunbarton College Luncheon

Another St. Patrick's Day Eve celebration will be a luncheon for the benefit of foreign missions at Dunbarton College of Holy Cross, 2935 Upton st. nw.

The Dunbarton Mission Society will present a play, written by Miss Jeanne Keffe, a senior student from Canandaigua, N. Y., at the college auditorium Friday night.

Another headliner today will be a speech at 12:30 p. m. at the Carlton Hotel by the Rt. Rev. William J. McDonald, professor of economic philosophy at Catholic University, before a luncheon meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club of Washington.

To celebrate The Day according to annual custom, the Ancient Order of Hibernians and its Ladies Auxiliary will parade from St. Patrick's Hall at 10 a. m. Friday to St. Patrick's Church, 10th and G sts. nw., where mass will be celebrated at 10:30 a. m. The mass also will be attended by the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick and other Irish groups.

Archbishop to Take Part

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, archbishop of Washington, will celebrate the solemn pontifical mass. A sermon will be delivered by the Most Rev. Bruan J. McEntegart, bishop of Ogdensburg, N. Y., and presiding will be the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States.

Sean Nunan, retiring Irish Minister to the United States, Mrs. Nunan and members of the legation staff will attend the mass at the oldest Catholic church in Washington. It will be the 156th annual celebration by succeeding generations of priests and parishioners at St. Patrick's.

The Friendly Sons of St. Patrick will hold a dinner at 7 p. m. Friday at the Mayflower.

Gold Medal to Vinson

Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson who has Irish ancestors on both sides of his family, will be awarded the Friendly Sons' gold medal for accomplishment and distinction.

An honorary member of the society, President Harry Truman, will be unable to attend because of his current vacation.

Guest speaker for the banquet will be Representative Edward J. Hart (D., N. J.).

The Hibernians will hold their St. Patrick's Day banquet at 7 p. m. in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel. Martin A. Cooke, president of the order, and Mrs. Michael J. Dowd, district president of the Ladies Auxiliary, are in charge of arrangements.

Representative Harry J. Davenport (D., Pa.) will be the guest speaker.

Irish War Veterans Dance

Another highlight on St. Patrick's Day festivities will be a dance at the Wardman Park Hotel Friday night, sponsored by the District of Columbia Post No. 17 of the Irish War Veterans.

Members will attend the 10:30 mass. They will lay a wreath at 1 p. m. at the Commodore John Barry statue in Franklin Park, 14th and I sts. nw., and another at 2 p. m. at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery.

The Cabin John Volunteer Fire Department will hold its annual St. Patrick's Day dance from 9 p. m. to midnight at the fire house on MacArthur blvd. in Cabin John, Md.

Another dance will be held at 10 p. m. at the Shoreham Hotel by the Pennsylvania Society of Washington.

The National Press Club will celebrate the occasion with a cocktail dance from 5:30 to 8:30 p. m. Friday.

Sean Hayden will be the principal speaker and guest of honor at the weekly luncheon at 12:30 p. m. of the Almas Temple Club, 1315 W st. new.

An "informal—wear your green" dance will be held by the Junior Chamber of Commerce at 9:30 p. m. at the Hangar Room of Washington National Airport.

At 9 p. m. Saturday, a St. Patrick's dance will be held at the Armed Services YMCA, 1736 G st. nw.

A postscript to St. Patrick's Day festivities will be the seventeenth annual musical play presented by the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick at 8:45 p. m. Monday at the Mayflower Hotel for benefit of the city-wide Milk Fund.

Airport to Test New Approach Lights Friday

$139,000 System Will Aid Landings In Murky Weather

The new system of "slope line" approach lights at National Airport, scene of two major air crashes last year, will be turned on for testing for the first time Friday night.

Begun a year ago and costing $139,000, the two rows of high intensity lights, extending 3500 feet into the Potomac River from the north-south runway, are designed to aid pilots in bad weather and night landing.

The slope-line system consists of 30 14-foot units, each with 10 lights similar to automobile headlights. The rows appear to airplanes as a funnel leading up to the runway.

When an aircraft is on course during its approach, the two rows appear to be uninterrupted lines of light. If a plane veers off course, the lights appear to break up into "echelons" pointing in the direction it is flying in error.

CAA officials said the new lights, which resemble those in operation at Idlewild Airport in New York and at the Los Angeles Airport, will also warn pilots of errors in altitude by the appearance of the angle at which they approach the runway.

The second of last year's two major air crashes at National Airport was attributed in large measure to bad visibility in landing. Six persons lost their lives when a transport plane undershot the field December 12, while 55 were killed November 1 when a P-38 crashed into an Eastern Air Lines DC-4.

Late-Comer Pays Income Tax at 4:59

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

"I," reported Miss Frances Zitelman, "am a last-minute girl. I come to work one minute of 8, and if I'm late for the train, the train is late."

Miss Zitelman, who lives at 4809 45th st. nw., was the 54,313th person to come to the Bureau of Internal Revenue for tax information this current season of the Form 1040.

She was also the very last person to make it.

Even so it didn't look as if she'd make it. She had to empty her purse, go through a stack of papers in it, before she found Form W-2—the all-important little paper that tells how much you made in 1949, and how much tax was deducted.

The 25 minutes it took to answer her problems were above par for yesterday's 1798 information seekers. Although yesterday's was the peak attendance for 1950, there were no lines at the end of the day. Monday was worst for that.

Bureau officials explained that most of the "customers" with the tough questions came in earlier in the week, making yesterday the day of the Short Form 1040

But the bureau has had lines—an average of 1000 a day—since January 2. The 54,313 total for the year was under 1949's total of 57,350.

Like the conscientious Bolling Field sergeant who stood in line for 2½ hours, probably 1950's record for waiting—at last to be told that all the Government wanted was $1.20.

Or the couple who listed a deceased relative, dead since 1948, as a matter of fact—as a dependent. The bureau said no. The couple couldn't understand it—ever since 1948 she'd been costing them money. The funeral was paid for on time.

The last day also produced a package to chuckle over. It was a box of laundry.

Bottle Clubs Served Writ On Closing

Judge Richmond B. Keech, yesterday ordered 11 after-hours clubs to appear in District Court April 5 and show cause why they should not be dissolved.

The clubs were chartered for various purposes including "literary, musical and scientific benefit" and "social uplift." Fay charges the charters are shams for violation of liquor and gambling laws.

Fay filed petitions to dissolve the 11 charters on Monday. The petitions were supported by affidavits from vice squad chief, Lieut. Roy Blick, and transcripts of the testimony given by managers of the clubs to the House District Subcommittee investigating Washington crime.

N. Y. Avenue Church Found Encroaching on Park Land

Rebuilding of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church has disclosed that the church portico has been illegally occupying 600 square feet of Federal park land for the past 95 years.

The land, on which the church steps and columns were located, is part of one of Washington's original parks, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission reported yesterday.

During its monthly meeting, the commission voted to recommend sale of the tract at its appraised value to the church on the grounds that it had never been used as a park and was necessary for the recent street channelization project there.

Indorsed a bill by Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) to authorize purchase of an old stone house at 3051 M st. nw., reputedly the oldest structure in the District and General George Washington's headquarters at one time.

Approved in principle the transfer of an unused strip of land behind the Georgetown Library running from R to Reservoir sts. nw., to the National Capital Parks for development as parkland.

Approved the offering on public sale of a small tract at 39th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw., Lot 1, Square 1800.

Received a report on purchase of land within the boundaries of the Fort Reno Recreation Center.

Capitol Span Critics Scored By Gen. Young

Tells Committee 'Fog of Testimony' Confuses Issue

District Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young yesterday accused critics of the East Capitol st. bridge plan of throwing up "a fog of testimony" to confuse the issue of solving a traffic problem.

General Young told a House District Subcommittee in the final session of public hearings on the East Capitol st. bridge bill, that Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant, 3d, had given "muddled" cost estimates to support an alternative bridge solution.

Grant Asks Hearing

General Grant heard General Young, bided his time to the end of the hearing, then asked an opportunity to reply. James C. Davis (D., Ga.) subcommittee chairman, said the group might hear General Grant's rebuttal in a later executive session.

Davis indicated, too, that before a decision is made on the bridge bill, he will visit the proposed Anacostia River bridge locations. He said he may decide today when the trip will be made.

The rival projects are:

1. The East Capitol St. Bridge.
2. The Massachusetts Avenue Bridge.

How Officials Stand

The District Commissioners and Federal Public Roads officials favor East Capitol st.; the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, of which General Grant is former chairman, and the Federal Parks officials favor the Massachusetts ave. plan. NCPPC yesterday reaffirmed this position in its meeting; General Young was not there, and his alternate, Lieut. Col. L. E. Cox, did not vote.

General Young, in the Hill hearing, charged opponents of the East Capitol project had been "irresponsible" in some of their arguments against it.

He said the Massachusetts ave. bridge, coupled with a trans-Anacostia bridge near M st. ne., considered as one project, would cost about 20 million dollars while the East Capitol st. span, in place of the other two, would cost about 12 million.

Two spokesmen for seven Southeast Washington citizens' associations, Charles A. Barker and Archie C. Edwards, opposed the East Capitol st. bridge plan and supported the Massachusetts ave. span.

Howard D. Woodson, of the Northeast Council of Civic Associations, backed the East Capitol st. bridge.

Court Cancels $75,000 D. C. Icy Sidewalk Suit

Judge Jennings Bailey has dismissed a $75,000 damage suit brought against the District as the result of injuries a woman says she suffered falling on a slippery sidewalk.

Bailey ruled that the city is not responsible for the walks covered with ice and snow adjacent to private buildings, when no negligence is charged to the city. The suit was brought by Miss Estelle Smith, of Henderson, Tex., who said she broke her wrist and elbow when she fell at 14th and K sts. in February, 1948.

Mother Asks $7500 In Flier Son's Death

District Court was asked yesterday to award $7500 damages to the mother of an Air Force captain who was crushed when his automobile rolled off a grease rack in a service station.

Mrs. Perna A. Zott, of 3726 Connecticut ave. nw., named as defendants the Texas Co. and the Wayne Pump Co. Killed in the accident was Capt. Robert C. Zott, stationed at Mitchel Field, N. Y., near which the accident occurred on June 25.

Judge May Let Soldier Off in Traffic Death

Judge Walter T. McCarthy imposed a one-year sentence on Sergt. Marvin E. Taylor, 32, of Fort Belvoir, but softenened the blow.

He continued the case until April 14 pending a probation report and said at that time he will entertain a motion for a suspended sentence. He set bond of $500.

Three other Fort Belvoir soldiers were riding in the car. One, Sergt Roy F. Jackson, 27, was fatally injured.

Testimony yesterday brought out that the truck, driven by Otis R. Major, 25, of Fredericksburg, Va., was about to turn into a drive in front of the Arlington Hotel and that its rear lights were in working order.

Taylor testified he was driving between 35 and 40 miles an hour at the time of the accident. However, after viewing pictures of the damaged vehicles, Judge McCarthy said he believed the soldier was traveling at "a terrific rate of speed."

2 Bandits Beat Druggist, Take $38, Checks

Two bandits beat and robbed Martin Silver, 48, a druggist, near his store at 4200 Wheeler rd. se. last night and escaped with $350 in checks and $38 in cash.

Silver had closed his store at 10:30 p. m. and was getting into his car when attacked. He was struck on the head with a gun or blackjack and knocked to the ground. The checks and cash were taken from his pockets.

One assailant, who appeared to be intoxicated, was described as thin and dark and about 5 feet 11. He was wearing an army-style field jacket.

His companion was between 30 and 35 years old, about 6 feet tall, and weighed between 200 and 225 pounds.

Fairfax Hits Falls Church Annex Suit in Bristling Reply

Fairfax County's answer to Falls Church's annexation suit was filed yesterday in the county circuit court—a bristling, 21-page attack on the fledgling city's land grabbing intentions.

The reply was signed by G. Wallace Carper, chairman of the County Board of Supervisors, and Hugh B. Marsh, Commonwealth's Attorney.

". . . an attempt to rescue a city which is financially in no position to take care of its own bare necessities so that there might be more people and property to contribute revenue to its treasury, and thus, for the time being at any rate, to continue to operate as a city."

Falls Church seeks to annex 10.75 square miles of Fairfax land north, east and south of its present borders. The city is now about three square miles in size. The annexation ordinance was adopted February 20.

The county, in its reply, contended that this ordinance is invalid. It claims that an earlier annexation ordinance, passed last July, is still in effect. This ordinance was for annexing 14.34 square miles.

"There is no necessity or expediency for the annexation of any of the territory," the reply continued. Falls Church's present limits "are ample and sufficient for all its needs." In addition, the city has "nearly, if not already, reached the debt limitation" set by law.

The county's $3 million sewer bond issue, snagged by the annexations suit, could be ruled out entirely if the annexation tribunal awards Falls Church any territory which is in the county's sanitary district No. 1, the answer asserted.

Senators Warned About Gallinger X-Ray Dangers

Gambling Issue

Police Probe Demanded by Businessmen

The District Commissioners last night were asked by the Federation of Businessmen's Associations to investigate the Metropolitan Police Department.

The action was taken by the merchants' group after they tabled a motion to indorse a 5-day, 40-hour week for policemen.

The motion to support the 5-day week plan was presented by Jerome B. McKee, Federation President.

John L. Sullivan, treasurer, promptly objected, suggested that the association should, instead, call for an investigation of the police department and its alleged relations with gamblers.

Sullivan, who represents the Northeast Businessmen's Association, said:

"It ill behooves the department to come forth with such a proposal at a time when its officers are suspect in connection with gamblers, and its members are brawling among themselves."

Sullivan asked for a "head, down through the ranks fact-finding expedition" not only for gambling contacts but for "low morale."

Louis F. Frick, secretary, representing the Southeast Businessmen's Association, said "everybody knows that something is wrong when it's against the law to play the numbers, yet it is going on all the time."

McKee, the Georgetown Businessmen's Association delegate, said "the petition should be worded carefully," and suggested that it be referred to the federation police committee "for wording."

This was approved by the 19 delegates present, along with a unanimous vote that the petition be sent to the Commissioners, demanding an investigation calling for a thorough inquiry into the entire department, especially in reference to gambling.

The federation, meeting in the board room of the American Security & Trust Co., adopted a report urging a study of charity drives. It requested that the United Services or Community Chest Federation, in cooperation with the Federation of Businessmen's Associations study the problems, formulate a campaign plan, and call a city-wide meeting of interested parties to put it across.

The group also indorsed the fair trade House bill to regulate the District's liquor industry; requested that the Welfare Department recheck its lists with a view to dropping unworthy cases; and favored the redrawing of laws governing unemployment compensation in the District with an eye toward eliminating abuses.

Barrett Still Silent On 3d Precinct Probe

Robert J. Barrett, Police Superintendent, told reporters yesterday he had "nothing to say" about the progress of his investigation into allegedly altered Third Precinct records and charges of perjury.

The investigation was launched March 8—Barrett said Monday it would take "perhaps a week or more" to complete.

Erasures, said to have been found in the patrol system signal book of the Third Precinct, indicate some persons—still unidentified—gave perjured testimony to the House District Subcommittee investigating Washington crime, Barrett declared.

The Police Department investigation is to determine who made the erasures, and who committed perjury.

Patients Exposed To Tuberculosis Infection, Budget Committee Hears

"Ridiculous" inadequacies in laboratory and X-ray services at Gallinger Hospital often have resulted in exposing other patients to victims of tuberculosis, a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee was told yesterday.

Conditions in the municipal hospital's admittedly weak departments were detailed by Dr. Joseph Fazekas, medical director, in support of the Commissioners' request for more personnel and new equipment to improve them.

Lister Hill (D., Ala.) subcommittee chairman, adjourned hearings on the 119-million-dollar 1951 city budget until 10 a. m. Friday, when he hopes to complete testimony of all department heads.

Citizen witnesses will be heard by the subcommittee Saturday, starting at 10 a. m., in Room F-82 at the Capitol, Hill announced.

"Intolerable Situation"

Dr. Fazekas read a letter into the record signed by about 50 student doctors assailing the "intolerable situation" in the hospital's radiology department. The letter, charging conditions "definitely mitigate against adequate diagnosis and treatment of patients to the detriment of patient welfare," said:

Frequently no laboratory technician is on duty for several hours in the evening to conduct lab tests on incoming patients.

Remedies Sought

To overcome these deficiencies the pending budget calls for 16 technicians to staff the new hospital laboratory, scheduled to open at the end of May; $30,000 for new X-ray equipment; and 11 new positions in thte radiological and X-ray department. More personnel also is sought to strengthen the anesthesia department.

Dr. Fazekas startled committee members with this justification for authority to employ a fulltime hospital pathologist:

"We never know, frankly, what our patients die of. And that's very bad medicine," he said. "We cannot have pathological conferences at the hospital, despite the fact that we have more deaths than any other hospital in the city."

Routine Tests Lacking

Dr. Fazekas further asserted patients have been discharged without even the "routine urine and blood tests which all patients should have."

In earlier testimony, Daniel L. Seckinger, District Health Officer, backed a proposal to give flourine treatment to half the city's school children next year. About 80,000 youngsters should receive the treatment at 3-year intervals, to stem tooth decay, he said.

Employment of a child welfare consultant was strongly urged by Seckinger to check local hospitals for conditions that might lead to outbreaks of infant diarrhea—"a disease which often has a 40 percent mortality" and one which hits the city "like a thief in the night."

Man With Wrist Slashed Is Found in Phone Booth

Called to the Greyhound bus terminal shortly before 4 a. m. yesterday, police found Samuel T. Woolridge, 36, in a telephone booth, his left wrist slashed by a razor blade.

Woolridge, who gave police his address as 6402 Brookville rd., Chevy Chase, Md., said he had been despondent because a daughter who had been living with him had left. Woolridge was taken to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation, police said.

Capital's Fashion-Wise

10 Best-Dressed Picked As Easter Parade Judges

WASHINGTON'S 10 best-dressed women were chosen yesterday by fashion editors of the city's four newspapers.

Election of the Capital's top 10 fashion-wise women was a preamble to the Connecticut ave. Easter Parade which will be sponsored by the Connecticut Avenue Association.

The 10 who will be invited to serve on a judging panel for the various Easter Parade contests fritz, Mme. Dendramis, wife of the Secretary of State; Mme. Henri Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador; Mrs. Morris Cafritz; Mme. Dendramis, wife of the Greek Ambassador; Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, jr.; Mrs. Sidney Kent Legare, Mrs. Barbara Prechel, Mrs. Millard Tydings, wife of the Maryland Senator; Mrs. Hoyt Vandenburg, wife of the Air Force Chief of Staff, and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, wife of the Undersecretary of Commerce.

Easter Sunday festivities, as being arranged by Alfred Pasternak, parade chairman, will include choosing the best dressed mother and daughter, best dressed father and son, best dressed boy or girl twins, best dressed brother and sister, best dressed grandmother and granddaughter, best dressed grandfather and grandson, best dressed husband and wife over 60, best dressed husband and wife under 60, best dressed family group, best dressed matrons and misses, best dressed bachelor and best dressed young lady escorted by a man in uniform.

Connecticut ave. merchants are contributing prizes to winners in each of the dozen categories.

Fashion editors who chose the 10 judges yesterday were Miss Peggy Preston of the Washington Post, Miss Eleni Sakes of the Evening Star, Miss Cobey Black of the Daily News and Miss Inga Runvold of the Times-Herald.

Society Will Attend Tenor's Hall Concert

A distinguished representation from Washington's society is expected to attend the Constitution Hall concert tonight of tenor Eddy Ruhl.

Patrons of the event include Ecuadorean Ambassador and Senora de Dillon, former Secretary of State and Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Gordon Gray, Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Forrest P. Sherman, Senator and Mrs. H. Alexander Smith and Senator and Mrs. Estes Kefauver.

To Meet Tonight

The regular monthly meeting of the District of Columbia Branch of the National Woman's Party will be held at Alva Belmont House, tonight at 8 o'clock. Following the business meeting there will be a panel discussion on the subject of the status of women in the United States and other countries in which members on the panel have lived within the past few years. Members may bring friends.

PLEATS make a lasting and lovely impression on NYLON!

Grecian gown of nylon tricot, permanently pleated. Shell pink or aqua, sizes 32 to 36. 12.95.

The miracle of NYLON. Have you ever seen anything like it? Take PLEATS, for example. You've always loved them but—what a chore it was to keep pleats in pleats! Not so with NYLON—once pleated it stays pleated—without the touch of an iron. Just whisk it dry and see the pleats fall into place as if new. No wonder our prettiest nylon undies are pleated. Gowns, slips, petticoats, chemise—our undie world is a-whirl with pleats!

Visitors Add Zest to Quiet Season

By Elizabeth Maguire

PARTIES YESTERDAY were small and unofficial. Except for out of town visitors, there is little stir these days in Washington's Lenten season society.

Miss Ivanhoe Holland, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Spessard Holland, is here for a few days between semesters at Florida State College. Her father and mother gave a dinner for her last evening at the Wardman Park, and they will give another dinner for her this evening.

Mrs. Clark McIlwaine, mother of the Marchioness of Milford-Haven, gave a small dinner last evening, and Leander McCormick Goodhart feted Rafaelle, Duchess of Leinster, at a dinner for 14 at Bellapais, his home overlooking the Potomac.

Commodore's Daughter Married in Paris

OF INTEREST to Washington is the announcement made by Commodore John Holmes Magruder USN (retired), and Mrs. Magruder of the marriage in Paris of their elder daughter, Mrs. Agnes Magruder Gorky, to John C. Phillips of Boston. Since the death of her first husband, Mrs. Phillips has been living with her two young daughters in Italy and France.

Mr. Phillips is a descendant of Wendell Phillips of Boston, pioneer abolitionist and reformer. He is the son of Mrs. John C. Phillips and the late Mr. Phillips, and he is a nephew of former Ambassador William Phillips. For the present, Mr. and Mrs. Phillips are living in Paris.

Embassy Dinners Attract Society

A DINNER was given last evening by the Ambassaor of Ecuador and Senora de Dillon in honor of the retiring Irish Minister, Sean Nunan, and Mrs. Nunan. In the company were Senator Theodore Francis Green, Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Russell Young, Mrs. Hamilton Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Holdrege, Mrs. Parker West, Representative and Mrs. Omar Burleson, and the Minister Counselor of Ecuador and Senora de Moscoso.

The Ambassador of Pakistan and Mrs. Ispahani entertained last evening at the second in a series of four dinners. Their guests were the Ambassador of Australia and Mrs. Makin, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Fox, Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Matthews, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Nash, Dr. Harry C. Byrd, Mrs. Martin Vogel and Mr. and Mrs. Rad Mobley.

Mrs. Millard E. Tydings gave a luncheon yesterday for her aunt, Mrs. Knight Cochran of Madison, Wis., who arrived in Washington last week for a month's visit. Mrs. Cochran is staying with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. De Veau, and later she will be the house guest of her sister, Mrs. Emlen Davies.

Col. F. H. W. C. J. van Dun, military attache of the Netherlands, and Mrs. van Dun entertained at cocktails yesterday at their home from 6 to 8 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus S. Kauffman have returned from a visit with their son-in-law and daughter, Capt. and Mrs. William R. Blaikie, USMC, of Kirkwood, Mo. Capt. and Mrs. Blaikie have just announced the birth of a daughter, Judith Ann. Mr. and Mrs. Kauffman also visited their younger daughter, Miss Marcia Macy Kauffman of Evanston, Ill.

Senator Gives Stag Lunch for Governor

SENATOR JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY gave a stag luncheon party last Monday for Gov. Munoz-Marin of Puerto Rico. The party was given in the office of the Secretary of the Senate, Leslie M. Biffle, and included members of the Senate Interior Committee, of which Senator O'Mahoney is chairman. Vice President Alben W. Barkley and the Secretary of the Interior, Oscar L. Chapman, were also guests.

Mary Haworth's Mail

After Flirting With Her Husband's Best Friend, Habitually Anxious Wife Is Deeply Despondent; Should She Offer Apologies to Erase the Mistake?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was brought up on a farm and really didn't have a whole lot, except for pride. I was glad to leave home at the age of 18. The memory I had of home was horrible. At first I didn't ever want to go back home, for I dreaded to think of my father's drinking and the old shack we lived in.

I left school when I was in the eighth grade—as you can see by this letter, perhaps. But I must say that I've taken many courses of study since I left home. I had to, as I am married to a fine fellow with a very good education and he continues to go to school. Maybe that is part of my trouble.

You see, I feel inferior, yet I can do many things that the average girl cannot. I am a good cook, a good mother, a good seamstress and I am pretty good in art. But I worry about everything and, although my husband is just wonderful, I always feel lonely. I am terribly nervous and I won't visit people. At present I get dizzy if I lower my head. I've consulted doctors and they say I am just a nervous person. I feel so depressed.

To make things worse, at a cocktail party I flirted with my husband's best friend and confessed that I liked him. Should I call and apologize for the terrible thing? I really don't care for him. The only person I love is my husband. We have been married 12 years and have three nice children. I look very young and am considered rather nice-looking for my age, I think. But I am terribly unhappy. What is wrong with me? Please try to help me. L. S.

Woman's Feelings Aren't Integrated

DEAR L. S.: Your penmanship is smooth, your language literate, you use good plain stationery and your attitude towards your subject is honest and sensitive—i. e., enlightened—so there is nothing about your letter that could be construed as giving indirect embarrassing evidence of little schooling.

The fact that you've compensated so well in this respect for educational lacks and other hardships in early life, indicates that your claim to above-average natural gifts is well justified. Overtly, at least, you are a self-made success in the field of womanhood—a good mother, good cook, good seamstress; well-married to a fine, devoted fellow whom you love and respect, and whose scholastic exertions keep you on your toes.

Unhealed Emotional Wounds

WHY, then, are you acutely anxious, lonly, fearful of company, etc.? I think the answer is that you still suffer from the unhealed emotional wounds inflicted by your dreadfully unhappy childhood in sordid conditions. In a sense, you suffer from split personality—or from a hangover of negative tensions that prevent your adult self from achieving comfortable accommodation to your good life as a woman.

To explain the split personality—on the one side, or shall we say to a large extent, you still unconsciously feel yourself to be the shamefaced child from the wrong side of the tracks, a frightened outcast from decent society, due to your father's behavior and the squalor in which you lived—an ignominious figure, bulled, threatened, unloved and rejected as "nobody" by all whose interest, sympathy or goodwill you craved. And, on the other hand, figuratively, is the real you—the rational self, the grown person, the wife and mother. But unfortunately, you never have acquired a feeling of wholeness, or of reality, about this "real self."

Recent Faux Pas Isn't the Problem

NOW, to indicate why your real self isn't in good control of your emotions nowadays—if you've ever studied an illustration of an iceberg afloat, and noted what a small showing it makes above water as compared to the destructive potentials below, you will have some idea of the size of your unconscious freight, as compared to your conscious awareness.

Although your life moves in pleasant paths nowadays, your unconscious is still loaded with childhood woes, shames, fears and rages—thus good feelings cannot gain entry into this vast subjective territory, and thus you proceed under the momentum of nightmare emotions belonging to the past, and consequently your real self takes no solid satisfaction out of the good experiences that are yours in adult years.

All things considered, your black remorse at having flirted a bit with your husband's friend is disproportionate to the deed, I think. If you were normally poised, psychologically and socially—i. e., on good terms with your past—doubtless the impetuous faux pas would not have occurred. For advice, dismiss that symptomatic blunder from your mind, and turn your attention to getting psychological help in healing the fundamental problem. M. H.

Music will be furnished by the Marine Band Orchestra.

Dr. Margaret Sebree, national president, will receive with Mrs. Truman at 11 a.m. Other honor guests who will attend the breakfast at high noon include Miss Carolina Nabuco of Brazil, the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de la Colina, the Ambassador of Peru

Taylor Caldwell, chairman of novels for the league, will speak briefly on "The Novel," and Faith Baldwin, national chairman of the short story will discuss "The Value of Contemporary Fiction." Margaret Culkin Banning, national chairman of features, will pose the question "Do You Want to be a Professional Writer?"

The principal talk will be made by Norman Cousins, whose subject will be "Dreaming About the Peace." Music will be provided by Eddy Ruhl, tenor, accompanied by Glen Carow.

'Y' Group to Hear Thailand Official

The World Fellowship Committee of the YWCA will hear Prince Wan Waithayakon, Ambassador from Thailand, at a luncheon today at 12:30 p. m. in Barker Hall at the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw.

Princess Wan Waithayakon, wife of the Ambassador, will be an honor guest at the luncheon.

Round-Clock Fashions Set For Benefit

Skirtlines, necklines, accents, accessories and double-duty dresses will be highlights of a round-the-clock style presentation at a fashion show-luncheon Friday at the Congressional Country Club for the benefit of the Florence Crittenton Home and Hospital for Unmarried Girls.

The affair will be sponsored by the Virgie G. Webster Circle of the Florence Crittenton Home, with the fashion show under the direction of Erlebacher's. Reservations may be made by phoning Mrs. Russell Lamar, Mrs. O. T. Carr, Mrs. Leslie V. Smith or the Congressional Country Club.

The Florence Crittenton Home and Hospital has evolved from the small "Hope and Help Mission" which stood on C and 2d sts. nw., in 1887, into a modern institution which today performs a vital community service in caring for unmarried mothers.

Girls admitted to the home are given prenatal care, sometimes for several months, and six weeks of postnatal attention. The hospital, although small, is complete and efficient and has a staff of four full-time nurses. Thirteen volunteer physicians, under chairmanship of Dr. Roger O'Donnell, contribute obstetric care. Four volunteer doctors under Dr. William Burdick provide pediatric services.

The Crittenton Home and Hospital receives its principal support from the 22 "circles" which work the year around to raise funds for its maintenance. Only 32 percent of the necessary upkeep comes from the Community Chest. Mrs. Robert E. Freer is president of the Crittenton executive board.

To Meet Today

Martha Washington Chapter, D. C. DAR, will meet today at 1 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Harry C. Sigourney, 5321 Colorado ave. nw. with cohostesses Mrs. J. W. Dodd and Mrs. Roxy Monroe.

JOY AND GLOOM—George Ann Hicks (left), "alternate" Maid of Cotton, adds another layer of lipstick as she sits on the hospital bed of Elizabeth McGee, the chosen Maid of Cotton, now ill with the "flu." George Ann flew in from Oklahoma yesterday as a "size 11" replacement for the ailing Elizabeth. The Maid of Cotton, designated by the cotton industry, annually tours American cities, London and Paris to promote all-cotton wardrobes

Maid Made Out in Borrowed Cotton

By Peggy Preston

IT WILL BE back to the physics lab at Oklahoma University Friday for George Ann Hicks, the pretty "alternate" for the ailing Maid of Cotton, Elizabeth McGee. But yesterday Miss Hicks reigned supreme as Cotton Queen of the hour in Washington.

With considerable aplomb for a 19-year-old, the college sophomore sailed through a series of radio broadcasts and personal appearances. The she topped off the day with a congressional reception and fashion show in her honor at the Statler Hotel.

George Ann, official alternate for this year's Maid, answered a hurried call to the colors Wednesday, when she received word that the Maid was ill with "virus flu," hence would not be able to fulfill official engagements for several days.

Paid a Call
At Hospital

HOPPING a fast plane East, George Ann reached here yesterday morning, forthwith made a call on Elizabeth at Georgetown Hospital.

"Get well in a hurry," she urged the sorrowful Elizabeth. "I'm flunking physics, and I've got to get back to the lab." Elizabeth, now on the mend, promised to relieve the understudy of her duties Friday. On that day the maid is scheduled to leave for New York en route to Europe.

Meanwhile George Ann is enjoying herself thoroughly, despite her worry over her studies. At yesterday's fashion show she pirouetted prettily in a series of cotton costumes created for the original maid. Almost the exact size of Elizabeth, George Ann was easily able to wear the elaborate cotton wardrobe made for the latter by leading American designers.

Cotton States
Well Represented

GEORGE ANN received guests at the reception attired in a pastel pink cotton late afternoon dress with inserts of matching organdy at the neckline. Later she modeled a two-piece frock of cotton satin, and a bridal ensemble from the collection of cottons presented by Jelleff's at the show.

Official representatives and their wives from the 18 cotton producing States turned out for the party that honored the lass chosen as fashion ambassador of the cotton industry. Others were there as well.

Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, was there to greet her, along with Mrs. John Steelman. Although the Senate was still in session when the reception got under way, Senator Olin Johnston of South Carolina was in attendance, along with his young daughter, Sally. Scores of Senate wives were present, including Mrs. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee; Mrs. Clinton P. Anderson of New Mexico, and Mrs. J. William Fulbright of Arkansas.

DRAPING fabric for a new spring frock on a dress form molded to her own figure proportions is Miss Edith Young. A form such as this is ideal for the home seamstress, permitting her to fit her garment properly. Eight of these individualized forms, made at Singer Sewing Centers, will be awarded first prize winners in each classification of The Washington Post Sewing Contest, along with $50 and $20 cash awards in each classification.

Greatest Pitfall in Sewing Removed With Dress Form

ASK ANY girl who sews—the greatest pitfall in making a garment for oneself lies in the fitting. The best cutting and stitching can come to naught if the fit is faulty, and the difficulties encountered in this field by the amateur are legion.

One recommended means of avoiding the trial and error method of self-fitting is to work with an individual dress form. Such a form is made to the exact proportions of your own figure and will serve as an infallible guide throughout the making of a garment.

Those using such dress forms find them to be invaluable aids that save both time and worry. No longer it it necessary to call in outside help when the seamstress reaches such critical points as the fitting of a sleeve, a shoulder or waistline.

Sewing Students
Always Use Them

STUDENTS find individualized dress forms especially helpful. At the 11 Singer Sewing Centers, where more than 1500 Washington women take sewing lessons each week, these forms are used by almost every student.

"It has really solved my sewing problems," attests Mrs. G. W. Mundy, an experienced home seamstress, who came to the center in order to learn how to fit a garment properly. Although she has sewed for members of her family for years, she has never, heretofore, had much luck making anything for herself.

Now, with her new dress form, she is completing a blue silk dress for spring, will shortly start another. When she completes her present course, consisting of eight two-hour lessons, she will take advanced instruction in suit and coat fitting.

The dress form she uses was made for her at the center. It is made of sheet plastic which was melted, then molded to her figure. The form then went through a series of processes, during which it was expertly trimmed, rechecked against Mrs. Mundy's measurements, hardened and covered with a cotton knit fabric.

8 Dress Forms
Offered as Prizes

WITH THE finished mold as her guide, Mrs. Munday is now equipped to do an accurate job of fitting her own garments.

Contestants in The Washington Post sewing contest, which opened March 1, and will be concluded April 15, have an opportunity to win one of these helpful sewing aids. Through the courtesy of the Singer Sewing Centers, a dress form will be awarded first prize winner in each of the eight classifications of the contest. These are in addition to the cash awards which will go to those placing first and second in each division.

Film Outlining Scout Program Shown at Tea

"Women of Tomorrow," a film short outlining the work of the Girl Scouts in the United States, was presented yesterday to a group of Girl Scout leaders and their guests at the Motion Picture Association of America.

Among guests at the showing and tea were Lady Berendsen, wife of the New Zealand Ambassador; Mrs. Hume Wrong, wife of the Canadian Ambassador; Mrs. Bruggmann, wife of the Swiss Minister; Mme N. A. K. Razn, wife of the Pakistan Military Attache; Mrs. Eric Johnson, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Paul Porter, Mrs. Monte Appel, chairman of the D. C. Girl Scout Board, and Mrs. Carl Aslakson, a member of the first Juliette Low Girl Scout troop in Savannah, Ga., in 1912.

MRS. Sidney Wood, of New York, admires a few of the roses, azaleas, and other flowers that will be on exhibit at the National Flower and Garden Show opening in Washington March 23, at the National Guard Armory. The show will continue through March 29. Mrs. Wood, the former Miss Anne Kiess, daughter of Mrs. Edgar R. Kiess and the late Representative Kiess, will return to Washington next week especially to see the flower show.

St. Patrick's Dance

Artist Designs Program Cover

Mrs. Cornelius Bretsch, an enthusiastic member of Mme. Dendramis' committee for the American premiere of the Cavalcade of Fashions to be presented in the Mayflower ballroom on April 13, is making a generous contribution to the benefit, proceeds from which go to Queen Frederika's children's fund.

She discovered here in Washington a talented artist, Nicholas Chramchenko, a DP who graduated from the academy in Kief, and commissioned him to design an appropriate cover for the souvenir booklet to be sold at the luncheon. For the front cover he has made a sketch of the Acropolis, for the back, the famed Winged Victory of Samothrace. A charming picture of Frederika, Queen of the Hellenes, with a group of her little Greek orphans, is used inside with a story of the Cavalcade and other features.

As a token of the contribution their country has made in sending this historic collection to tour America, King Paul and Queen Frederika are to receive copies of the souvenir booklet.

Talk on Germany

The Mount Holyoke Club of Washington will hold a luncheon meeting today with Charles LaFollette, former military governor of Wurttemberg-Baden, as guest speaker. He will talk on "Germany: To Be Salvaged or Scavenged?"

Husbands of members are invited to attend the luncheon, which will be held at the American Veterans' Committee Headquarters, 1751 New Hampshire ave. nw., at 1 p. m. For reservations call Mrs. W. M. Southworth, jr., 3700 Massachusetts ave. nw., Emerson 6726.

Ask Anne

'Sticky' Frying Pan Needs Help And Oven Seasoning Does Trick; Old-Fashioned Tapioca Still Sold

DEAR ANNE:
I have an aluminum frying pan which sticks, regardless of the kind of grease used. What can be done to remedy this? E. H. N.
Washington.

I suggest that you season this sticky pan. Aluminum usually doesn't require this treatment, but it should help to cure it of its annoying ways. Cover the inside with unsalted oil or fat and slip it into a very slow oven (250 degrees F.). Leave for a couple of hours, rubbing on extra fat several times during this period. Let pan cool with fat on it, then wipe off excess.

DEAR ANNE:
Where can I buy "pearl" tapioca? Is it larger than the regular tapioca? Can it be substituted in regular tapioca recipes? P. E. R.
Washington, D. C.

Old-fashioned pearl tapioca can be obtained in several fancy groceries here, though it's been largely replaced by the quick-cooking kind. The grains are bigger, the large pearl tapioca being about the size of a pea and medium about the size of BB-shot. Telephone numbers of three stores stocking it are: Decatur 3366, District 8250 and Columbia 2430.

It can be substituted for quick-cooking tapioca in your recipes, but you must use twice as much of the pearl. Before cooking, soak it for an hour in enough water to cover. Then drain and cook it in liquid in a double boiler until transparent. You're now ready to use it in pudding, pie or whatnot.

DEAR ANNE:
I would like to match the material of a suit jacket. Can you tell me if there is an organization or firm which can do this for me professionally? C. Y. S.
Washington.

Individual tailors will sometimes obtain matching materials for you when they are altering your clothing. However, I know of no firm that specializes in matching fabrics. Any tips, readers?

DEAR ANNE:
Can you find me a recipe for a good rum filling for the inside of an angel food cake? The cake is hollowed out, the filling put in, the top fitted on again, and the cake covered with whipped cream—a beautiful dessert. S.P.B.

Have any readers the recipe for this delectable treat?

DEAR ANNE:
Can you tell me where in the Washington area or in Arlington, Va., I can learn to make old-fashioned hooked rugs from my own material?
I want to use only wool rags and cut and design my own rugs. MRS. R. S.

A class in making hooked and braided rugs with your own discarded woolen materials was started last week at the Roosevelt Center, 13th and Upshur sts., nw. You may still enter it, I am told. Hours for class meetings are 7 to 10 p. m. on Thursday. Both men and women are eligible.

DEAR ANNE:
I would very much like to start a hobby of making model houses, true to scale, complete with furniture. Could you tell me if there is a hobby shop in or near Washington, or some other establishment, where I could get materials and information. M. B. S.
Alexandria, Va.

Under "Model Makers Supplies" in the yellow section of the telephone book, you will find a number of firms listed that sell supplies, plans, or kits for model houses. I would suggest you telephone those most convenient to you and see just what they have. Supplies and plans for tiny furniture are harder to find, I am told. However, you can buy dolls' furniture or construct it according to your own ideas.

DEAR ANNE:
There is a liquid nail polish, used by men, that I would like to have and haven't been able to locate. It is colorless and gives a smooth finish without a hard, mirror-like gloss. Do you know a dealer who has it? Not-So-Bright
Fredericksburg, Va.

The only colorless nail polish I know about is the kind that has a bit of gloss and is used by the ladies, too. Maybe some reader who is well posted on masculine cosmetics can give us a tip.

Washington Junior Chamber of Commerce members will entertain their auxiliary, the Jayncees, at a luncheon at the Burlington Hotel on today at 12:0 p. m.

The Jayncees are 2 years old this month. The Jaycees' annual ladies' day luncheon will honor that birthday and help the wives celebrate with a style show presented by Jelleff's, Inc.

Sewing Club Was Speechless

When I Served My Gorgeous Reddi-wip Dessert!
For once everybody was speechless when I proudly brought in my gorgeous dessert, lusciously decorated with Reddi-wip. They just couldn't understand how I could serve anything so glamorous with absolutely no preparation or work. Reddi-wip whips itself at the touch of a finger. Made with pure, rich cream, it turns even simplest desserts like gelatins, cupcakes, and puddings into gorgeous treats—instantly. Get Reddi-wip today!

Martin Raps Fiscal Policy in Arlington Talk

House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., last night lashed out at the Administration for its policy of "tax and tax, spend and spend." He and Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) spoke to the Republican Club of Arlington at the home of M. T. Broyhill, 2561 North Vermont ave., Arlington.

"Our spendthrift planners in Washington are running into the red at the rate of 16 million dollars a day," Martin charged. "The Administration has now abandoned even the pretense of responsible fiscal management. The demands for an honestly balanced budget are met with excuses and even jeers."

Virginia, the Massachusetts Republican pointed out, turned $768,000,000 into the Federal Treasury in the 1948 fiscal year, but got back only $81,000,000 in Federal grants, aids and payments.

"The bald truth," Martin declared, "is that Virginia could do for herself everything the Federal Government is now doing with grants and aids—and save millions of dollars a year in the bargain."

The Democratic administration, he charged, is leading the Nation to "bankruptcy, depression and ruin."

Martin asserted "it is high time we opened the sacred and untouchable precincts of the State Department to the living fresh air of American public opinion.

"The American people are entitled to know what are our real policies abroad," Martin added, "and they are entitled to ask frankly if those policies are being applied by men and women in the State Department who are in full sympathy and accord with our traditional American ideals . . ."

Tavern Fracas Proves Fatal To Ex-Marine

The victim was David A. Fox, 42, of 6908 Bellwood ave., Seat Pleasant.

Prince Georges County Police charged James Crowley, 30, of 6511 Davis st., Maryland Park, Md., with manslaughter. He was released under $500 bail.

Police said Crowley entered Johnny's Tavern, 6700 Roosevelt st., Seat Pleasant, ordered a bottle of beer, and joked with the proprietor, John Bowen, about turning on the juke box.

The subject, Crowley said, was a standing joke between the two. Fox, who was waiting for Bowen to give him a ride home, approached Crowley menacingly, Crowley and Bowen told police.

Crowley, police said, struck Fox and knocked him down. Fox was rushed to Casualty Hospital when patrons noticed him bleeding from the ears.

Dr. James I. Boyd, Prince Georges County medical examiner, will perform an autopsy today to determine cause of death. A hearing will be held March 31 in the County Police Court at Upper Marlboro.

Marty Brill Held For Lewd Conduct; Ex-Football Star

Los Angeles, March 15 (AP). — Marty Brill, 44, Notre Dame football star of 20 years ago, was charged today with lewd conduct in a theater.

Officer A. G. Wiseman accused Brill, married and the father of three children, of making an improper advance. Brill said he had several drinks and vaguely recalled being jostled by someone in the theater. Wiseman quoted the former grid great, now a salesman:

"Why don't you guys give me a break? I'm a married man with three kids. I haven't done anything like this since I was a kid. I don't know why I grabbed hold of you tonight. I'm Marty Brill, the famous football player."

Housepainters Hurt When Scaffold Breaks

Two housepainters were injured in a 25-foot fall yesterday when their scaffold broke as they were painting a building at 7901 Georgia ave., Montgomery Hills, Md.

Ralph Allison, 50, of 723 Quincy st. nw, was detained at the Washington Sanitarium with a fractured wrist and ribs. His coworker, William Hardy, 50, of the Spring-Bank Trailer Camp, Alexandria, was treated for back bruises and abrasions.

Radio, TV Programs Criticized For Shirking Responsibility

Detroit, March 15 (NYHT).—The closing sessions of the eighteenth annual convention of the National Catholic Conference on Family Life here today heard an urgent plea for the Nation's business, radio and television leaders to provide more programs with principles of family life.

Richard E. Hobbs, radio chairman of the Detroit Archdiocesan Council of Catholic Men, told the 500 delegates that radio and television programs are failing to meet their responsibility to the Christian home.

"The sponsor who controls the 'commercial' has much to say as to what is put on the air," Hobbs declared. "The type of program you hear or see is determined by the sponsor and the broadcast, and although the program may be quite acceptable it does not necessarily mean that it is good for you.

"Radio and television fill the need for entertainment, recreation and relaxation for the family, but too often they miss the source and principle of family life. They fail to give God the place he deserves."

Hobbs said he didn't mean a great increase in strictly religious programs but rather a much greater integration of religious principles into every program, because the programs reach 95 percent of American homes.

The Rev. Bertin Roll, director general of the Archconfraternity of Christian Mothers, declared, "The world today is what mothers are and it will never be any better than the mothers" in an urgent plea for a return of Christian teaching in the home.

"It happened just as I tuned in that new mystery program!"

Blast Rocks Driveway Of ABC Agent's Home

Rocky Mount, Va., March 15 (AP). A charge of dynamite was exploded early today in a driveway at the home of H. L. Wyland, ABC agent here.

Damage from the blast, set off by an unidentified person or persons, was not serious, police said, but a number of windows in the Wyland residence were blown out. Wyland's car also suffered minor damage. No one was hurt.

ABC officers are investigating the blast. Wyland has been stationed here for about 10 years and has been active in a number of cases.

"Our problem is not the training of children in the Christian way," he said, "but rather training their parents."

He reported that 60 percent of the children entering the first grade in Catholic schools "cannot make the sign of the cross, but they can describe Superman. They can direct you to the nearest movie, but not to the closest church."

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Shakespeare Must Have Lived in Washington

"It happened to me only yesterday," writes Nora Moser of 702 Devon pl., Alexandria, Va., as she recalls the Shakespeare sonnet that goes:

"Why didst thou promise such a beauteous day . . . And make me travel forth without my cloak . . . To let base clouds o'ertake me in my way?"

ADD DEFINITIONS

The other day we used the suggestion that "televersion" be used to designate the television version of a play or movie.

Comes now a suggestion for a very similar word—"tela-version." It means: "An aversion to television."

ON BEING A PUBLIC SERVANT

This Tuesday afternoon (for the umpteenth time) northbound traffic on 14th st. nw. was beautifully snarled up as it came abreast of the District Building.

As usual, the cause was a District vehicle parked in the forbidden zone parallel to the loading platform. The culprit this time was a truck assigned to the D. C. Division of Printing and Publications. It berths there quite frequently.

After a while, the drivers in the curb lane would start wondering about the delay. With much honking of horns, they'd try to fight their way into the one traffic lane that still remained open. Several narrowly missed mashing fenders.

Inasmuch as a great deal of the space around the District Building is specifically reserved for District vehicles (there's a spot in back for delivery trucks only) it's hard to understand why traffic on a busy thoroughfare must be disrupted so frequently—and so needlessly.

WHERE'S THE CIGAR?

Harold Hughes of 1324 Fort Stevens dr. nw. says that inasmuch as I never run my picture in the column, he's drawn a sketch of what he thinks I look like.

Kindly note that he has drawn me a pair of spectacles, and those are not supposed to be bags under my eyes.

MISCELLANY

Despite the unseasonably high temperatures hereabouts recently, Pepco statisticians find that their average residential customer is using more kilowatt hours of electricity than ever before in the firm's history . . . Friends of Earl H. (Pappy) Gammons, CBS vice-president for Washington, will be glad to know that Pappy is almost completely recovered from his attack of virus pneumonia and is again able to work a few hours a day . . . Come to think of it, what vice-president ever works more than a few hours a day? . . . Mrs. Dell Winterfield of 1905 Kalorama rd. nw. tells me she misses the little legal feature "What's The Verdict?" that used to appear on our radio page, and wonders why we don't run it any more. The answer is that the man who used to write it is now on leave of absence with ECA in Paris, and I certainly hope he'll be back to resume the feature before long. I miss it, too, and besides its author used to be my golf partner in matches against Bus Ham and Shirley Povich . . . Irma C. Baber of 3303 E. Capitol st. postcards: "Pay no attention to robins. The first real sign of spring is the return of the Good Humor Man—and he's back."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Brownish female pup, 2 months old." (Adams 7699.)

"Two lovable 6-week-old black female puppies; will deliver." (Glebe 8464.)

"Two small black puppies, 7 weeks old; a brother-and-sister act." (Oliver 2935.)

AROUND THE CORNER

And why do women cry?
Son, Cupid's oiling up his wings
And good old Spring is nigh.

COLD FACTS

A couple of weeks ago, while I was fighting a beaut of a cold, I came across a startling development.

The manufacturer of a cold remedy had decided not to advertise in Washington, "because people in Washington have fewer colds than elsewhere in the Nation."

Currently, I am down with my fifth cold of the season—but my mail bag offers a bit of consolation.

Mrs. Nicholas J. DeLollis of 222 N. Thomas st., Arlington, Va., tells me that WTOP's Eddie Gallaher was down with a cold recently. And her own 5-month-old "Little Noodnik" had one, too.

Patty Planck of 3234 N. Pershing dr., Arlington, Va., reports, "I had a whopper of a cold at the same time you had yours—and of course it had to be right at the time there was a Scout square dance." J. Scarborough of 30 Plattsburg ct. nw., chimes in with: "I've never had such a cold as this one."

Mrs. Ralph D. Hagerman of 5029 1st st. nw. reports: "I'm just getting over a nasty cold, and three of my friends are coming down with them. My husband will probably be the next to catch the bug—he says he gets all his colds from me."

Mrs. W. P. Snyder of 449 Hampton ct., Falls Church, Va., has "a Ha! and a sneer" for the guy who took that survey showing Washingtonians have fewer colds than other Americans.

"They probably did their research in July," snaps Mrs. Snyder. "My 42-month-old son has had 37 colds; my 32-month-old daughter has had 32 colds; and I've caught all 69 of them."

From Lil Bean of 1321 N. Troy st., Arlington, Va., comes a convincing reconciliation of the survey with reader testimony to the contrary. Lil writes:

"I came to Washington in January of 1946 and have had only one cold. I got it in January of 1946 and still have it. A friend of mine came here 13 years ago and has had the same cold for 13 years. The Public Health Service is absolutely right when it says that colds are not communicable in Washington. In this town, everybody has his own cold—and there's nobody left to communicate one to."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Billions Voted Without Roll Call

By Drew Pearson

(Copyright 1950, The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

With economy the watchword on Capitol Hill, Senators and Representatives might be better off criticizing the bureaucrats less and paying more attention to how Congress itself handles the taxpayers' money.

Pearson

The power to tax and spend rests squarely on congressional shoulders, and by juggling the purse strings Congress can control the Federal Government.

Yet, believe it or not, Congress appropriated 29 billion last year without so much as a record vote. In other words, the taxpayers had no way of determining how their representatives voted.

In many cases, the majority of Congressmen didn't even show up to vote when expenditures running into millions of dollars were approved.

Because this is a careless way to handle the taxpayers' money, conscientious Congressman Dwight Rogers of Florida is urging a resolution to require a roll call vote on all appropriations.

Note: Here are some of the appropriations approved last year without a roll call vote: $7,617,739,361 for independent agencies; $12,949,562,498 for the military establishments; $3,090,528,903 for the Treasury and Postoffice Departments; $2,387,779,885 for the Labor Department and Federal Security Agency; $715,601,607 for the Agriculture Department; $584,098,797 for the Interior Department; 100 million dollars for Palestine refugees.

Soviet vs. Pearson

The Soviet-controlled press recently launched a diatribe against yours truly, calling him, among other things, "The chained dog of the monopolists of Wall Street." The attack was publishe1 in Ogonek, the Life magazine of Russia.

"In his newspaper column," says Ogonek, "Pearson resorts to complicated sleight-of-hand. He is an acknowledged master of the art of lying and slandering, and other columnists and commentators envy him . . .

"Pearson's connections are widespread. He doesn't have to hunt for sensations. Ministers, generals, admirals, high-placed Government officials and gangsters supply him with sensational rumors, gossip, and, in particular, slanderous fabrications about the Soviet Union. With Pearson's help, dark intrigues are frequently consummated . . .

"On one occasion Pearson concocted a radio discussion on the question of 'democracy.' As 'experts,' he invited such arch-reactionaries as the then Attorney General Tom Clark; Clare Boothe Luce (wife of the owner of the reactionary magazines Life and Time) and the notorious warmonger James Byrnes (former Secretary of State.)

"As American newspapers have frequently disclosed, Pearson has powerful friends in the United States Senate, including Senators O'Mahoney, Bridges and other arch-reactionaries. In the House of Representatives, he enjoys the favor of the Speaker, Sam Rayburn, and the Republican leader, Joe Martin. Pearson also has ties with the FBI (the American Gestapo). . . .

"Pearson frequently comes out with provocative announcements. In the general howl of the warmongers his voice also is heard, the husky voice of the mongrel true to his master. Pearson is an unwavering adherent of the maniacal plans for the establishment of world domination by American monopoly. He has cynically declared that the United States has enough atom bombs to throw a few on every one of the countries that are members of the U. N.

"Some time ago the International Organization of Journalists, at the proposal of the Polish delegate, adopted a resolution condemning malicious instigators and propagandists for war. It called upon the national association of journalists to expel from their ranks persons blackening themselves with war propaganda, race and national hatreds, misinformation and slander. In the disgraceful list of these journalists appears the name of Pearson, a gangster of the press, the chained dog of the monopolists from Wall Street."

Japs Watch Democracy

Another step in the political re-education of Japan took place without fanfare the other day—9000 miles from Japan in a Washington committee room. Though no reporters were on hand to witness it, members of the United States Senate and Japanese Diet sat across the table from each other and exchanged political ideas.

If the same scene had taken place 10 years sooner, Pearl Harbor might never have happened.

One Senator on the American side of the table was a former missionary to Japan—high-minded Elbert Thomas of Utah. Another had been a Marine wounded in battle against the Japanese—scholarly Paul Douglas of Illinois.

This battle scene was solemnly recalled by Senator Douglas. He told how the Japanese fought a last-ditch stand though outnumbered two to one by the Americans.

"The Japanese fought bravely and valiently," declared Douglas. Then, looking squarely at the Japanese legislators across the table, he added: "I am now looking forward to the Japanese fighting just as hard for democracy as they fought against it."

Throughout the visit, the Japanese asked most of the questions, chiefly on the technical processes of democracy. But the Americans wanted to know, in return, how the Japanese public feels about America.

"Perhaps I am in the best position to answer that," replied Takizo Matsumoto, slowly. "You see I represent Hiroshima.

"I was educated in the United States. I have many American friends and American ties," he continued. "This is well known by the people of Hiroshima. Yet they have always elected me by overwhelming majorities.

AH, THE FLOWERS of Spring! Beautiful, beautiful cut flowers are blooming in profusion at Center Market City.

And let us tell you about plants you can buy for your garden. Delvigne's have some lovely azalea plants, and the tulips are something out of a dream. If you're thinking of new plants for your garden this spring, investigate the little pansy plants at this stand.

And wonderful little columbine plants. Candytuft and Gallardia plants are just itching to get into some good, rich soil. And if you like the lovely little flower of the flax, Delvigne's stand at the front entrance of the Market has them for you.

• • •

LET'S wander down the fruit and vegetable stands. Temple oranges are plentiful, but a bit higher in price than they were a few weeks ago. Cuban pineapples are on market, and wonderfully rich yellow bananas from Cuba.

Have you tried zuchinni yet? This Italian squash is plentiful now, and Lima beans from Florida are here. Kale, Spinach and collard greens are all on market. Beets, carrots and rutabagas are here, as are escarole, endive and yellow wax beans from Florida.

Fresh asparagus is here from California, but the prices are still high, as it is just beginning to come in. Time was, though, when a bunch of this quality asparagus, at this time of the year, sold for $2.50 a bunch.

• • •

IF YOU LOVE chives, and who doesn't, you can buy little chive plants at the Market. They come in little pots and you may grow them either in your kitchen or transplant them to your garden. Most of the fruit and vegetable stands have them now.
